PREFACE.

The following is the semi-annual Index of Volume LXXVIII of the Record and Guide, containing complete lists of the Auction Sales, Conveyances, Leases, Mortgages and Buildings Projected in New York City during the last six months of 1906. Those wishing to keep a file for permanent reference should see that all the numbers are complete and have them bound. Cost of binding $2.50 per volume. A suitable temporary binder, holding one volume, can be obtained at the office, 11-15 E 24th st and 14 and 16 Vesey st; price, one dollar.

THE KEY.

* Before any page No. indicates an Auction Sale.

† Before any page No. indicates a New Building Projected.

Figures in parenthesis are leases.

Figures preceded by capital letters are mortgages, said capital letter indicating the first letter of the name of the mortgagor.

Figures without any signs whatsoever are Conveyances.

EXAMPLE.

145th st, n s, bet Amsterdam av and Broadway..25, T 40, †45, 72, T 93, †289, 417, *870, (925).

On page *870 an auction sale will be found.
On pages 25, 72, 417 a conveyance will be found.

On pages T 40, T 93 a mortgage will be found.

On page (925) a lease will be found.

On pages †45, †289 will be found plans for a new building.

AUCTION SALES.

The * appearing before any number indicates the page on which to find an Auction Sale.

CONVEYANCES.

are distinguished by numbers without having signs attached thereto. In many instances there will be found streets, etc., indexed under pages which, on being examined, show at once that they are not in their proper order according to our customary alphabetical and numerical arrangement. A further examination will disclose the fact that while the properties appear more prominently under the other street descriptions, they nevertheless extend to the streets, etc., indicated by the Index, and having a frontage on same have been included in the paging, and it will necessitate a somewhat more thorough search than usual to locate it. The Leases, Mortgages, Auction Sales and Projected Buildings are indexed in a similar manner to the plan followed with the Conveyances.

LEASES.

The figures in parenthesis denote that the transaction on the page given is Leasehold, an assignment of lease or a lease running for a short or long term of years. This explanation is made so that subscribers searching for transfers in fee can at once distinguish between the former and the latter without referring to the pages mentioned.

MORTGAGES.

All the mortgages are indexed against the street or avenue in which the property is located, and memoranda added to enable searchers to find the particulars in "The Record and Guide." See "Example." The streets and avenues are so subdivided that very few references are necessary. All readers of "The Record and Guide" are aware that the mortgages appear weekly in alphabetical order, so that they have, so to speak, a weekly index of mortgagors. This publication of an index against property completes the information which those interested may require.

PROJECTED BUILDINGS

are included under the same general heading, and are distinguished by the † which precedes the numbering.

Mortgages and Projected Buildings.BOROUGH OF MANHATTAN.
STREETS.

NOTE.—Longitudinal streets, roads and places, such as the Bowery, Boulevard, Broadway, etc., which run parallel with the various avenues, will be found in alphabetical order amongst the avenues.

PRICES of stocks have been higher this week, but whether this indicates that general improvement in the market is at hand, or it is mere short covering, cannot be stated with any reasonable degree of positiveness. London showed advances in American stocks on our National holiday, but activity in the British metropolis in our securities is not important, inasmuch as the cue for higher figures is invariably taken from this side of the Atlantic. There are evidences, however, of a better feeling, and although the clouds of pessimism still are over the market their texture is of a somewhat lighter character. The situation is one about which it is scarcely safe to generalize, for surprises may be sprung upon us when least expected. It is a curious fact that in seven years of the last ten years a bull market has been begun in July. Perhaps, the higher opening on Thursday morning for some leading stocks may be a forerunner of the proverbial repetition of history. There were gains of from one to five points in Anaconda, Great Northern preferred, Louisville, Copper, the Steels, Reading, Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Gas, Smelters and Pennsylvania, showing that the appreciation was equally distributed both in industrials and railroads. Prices in London, too, came much higher, and incidentally it seems that in this paradoxical market stocks go up more quickly and easily than they go down. So the Cassandras who have talked about general business contraction and of a desire on the part of some interests to bring about thorough liquidation, may prove to be untrustworthy authorities. Then, we are also told that there would be little disposition for investors to come into the market until dividend paying stocks had further declined with the cost of long time loans. But, according to the American humorist it is not safe to prophesy unless you know. A favorable feature of the situation is the excellent outlook for the crops, which should be a bull argument. The money situation is also decidedly better. Foreign exchange is likewise at a point where we can take gold profitably, but it is doubtful whether any large amount will be engaged. Reports from the leading commission houses show that they are carrying for customers fewer stocks by twenty-five per cent. than at this time last year; from which fact readers may draw their own conclusions.

FROM the foregoing summary of present conditions, it is plain that both English and foreign investors believe in the United States. Our government's report on the condition of Cotton on June 25th had an exceedingly favorable effect upon British sentiment, as did the thrashing returns from the winter wheat crop and the estimates of spring and winter wheat. The Russian situation is still a disturbing element, and is likely to remain so indefinitely from present appearances. But, if prosperity means anything, there is certainly nothing to complain of in this country. From Cleveland, Ohio, we learn the first half of this year has been the most prosperous in the history of the iron trade. The outlook for the second half is also very favorable. The recognized authority in the United States on Iron and Steel points out that the scarcity of labor adds a new and perplexing element to the situation. There is said to be too much prosperity. Lack of hands it is stated has made it impossible for the leading coke companies to operate more than ninety per cent. of their ovens, and they are, therefore, forced to purchase some coke in the open market. The rail makers are also overwhelmed with orders, the aggregate tonnage for the next year's delivery amounting to 150,000 tons. Orders for the heavier classes of finished material continue to come in, among them bridge work for the Southern Railway, and ten thousand tons for bridge work in Pittsburgh. With such great activity in our great staple material it is difficult to believe that there should be any misgivings for the future and that for the time being, at any rate, the country is not going to rack and ruin.

BIG BUILDINGS in New York have by no means attained the maximum height and in the opinion of many builders the colossal structures of the future will much overshadow those now described as skyscrapers. But, if the construction of high buildings is only partly attained, the utilization of small buildings, and especially those on important thoroughfares, does not seem likely to go much farther, as there is a limit to the endurance of the old foundations, and the building and tenement house laws operate to prevent many other changes. A means, however, has been found for making small old buildings on leading thoroughfares more profitable for rental purposes without danger to the structures themselves or without violence to the building laws. This has been accomplished by the method of subdividing the smallest stores under a plan which may be best, perhaps, described as "dividing them in quarters." That is, a store having a frontage of twenty-five feet and a depth of fifty, 1,250 square feet is thus divided: one store has a frontage of 12½ feet to a depth of 25 and the other has a frontage of 12½ feet with a depth of 50 on one side and 25 on the other. This gives two stores with a frontage of 12½ feet each to be let to two tenants, the shallow store fulfilling the requirements of those who particularly require a "show" on a thoroughfare, while the other store is rented to a tenant who requires both show and space. By this simple method, seen to be general since May 1, the rental value of a New York store is increased 50 per cent. without material expense for alterations, and the plan has been found to work so well that it is being generally adopted.

NEW YORK CITY is one of the dozen American cities which owe their first, if not their chief, prosperity to the excellence of their harbors. Portland, Boston, Philadelphia, Norfolk, Charleston, Savannah, Mobile, New Orleans, Galveston, San Francisco and Seattle are the others. But while most of these cities have been developing their commerce upon lines which left the development of dock privileges to chance or necessity, the City of New York has not only acquired the practical control of all its important docks, but has developed them as practical aids to commerce. The cities of the United States have, collectively, $60,000,000 invested in docks, wharves, piers and landing places, and of this amount the City of New York has $45,000,000—three-quarters of the whole sum. Boston has $300,000, Philadelphia $1,100,000, Mobile $1,500,000 and New Orleans $5,000,000. The other port cities of the country have no docks or wharves as a municipal asset. Among interior cities—interior to the seaboard—Cincinnati, Louisville, Duluth, Pittsburg and Memphis are the ones having a considerable ownership of wharves for river or lake commerce. Pittsburg and Cincinnati have $1,150,000 each and Sacramento $225,000. The policy of New York City for many years has been to make its water-front productive, and this result has been attained by the carrying forward of a comprehensive system for dock building and for subsequent dock use by reletting. The dock rights of New York were acquired at different times and in different ways—some by right of colonial grant, others by development, and still others by actual purchase. Valued at $45,000,000 at present, the docks and wharves of New York represent to the city an actual value, judged by the revenue they yield and the benefit to business which they assure, of not less than $100,000,000, probably.

THE SUGGESTION made by the Corporation Counsel to refer the matter of the revocation of the stoop permits on Fifth avenue to the City Improvement Commission is an excellent one. Doubtless many of our readers will wonder what the City Improvement Commission is and what authority it has; but the commission is a body whose value is out of all proportion to the advertising it has received. During his first term Mayor McClellan appointed this commission for the purpose of drawing up a plan for the improvement of the street layout of New York City and for the proper adornment of these streets with monuments, public buildings and so on. About eighteen months ago the commission presented its preliminary report, in which a group of not very radical changes were suggested in the plan of New York City. This report was announced as merely tentative, and the intention was that it should provoke public discussion, and be succeeded by a comprehensive and final scheme. Presumably the commission is still engaged in considering such a scheme; but if so, nothing much has been said about it. As for the tentative plan, it has created no more public interest and aroused no more edifying discussion than if it had never been conceived. Nobody has apparently given it a second thought since the day of its publication, and a better illustration could not be desired if the lack of public interest in any improvement of the plan and appearance of the American metropolis. Even an improvement such as the widening of Fifty-ninth st, which is rendered so essential by the approaching completion of the Blackwell's Island Bridge, has been entirely dropped during the past three years, and it doubtless will not come up for discussion again until the completion of the bridge makes a spacious approach absolutely necessary. Nevertheless, it was as we have said, an excellent idea of the Corporation Counsel's to give the City Improvement Commission something to do. Under happier conditions it is capable of being a useful part of our city government. Indeed, we should not be surprised to find the City Improvement Commission, or some similar body, eventually in possession of powers analogous to those of the Rapid Transit Commission—powers, that is, which will enable it actually to initiate and to lay out desirable alterations in the street plan of New York City. But that time is not yet. Just at present the only way to make it useful is to use it in such small ways as may seem practicable; and this is what Mr. Delany has just done. We trust that the experiment will be successful and that it will constitute a precedent.

Future of the Wholesale and Retail Districts.

FIFTH avenue as a thoroughfare for the highest class of retail trade is still gaining. One by one the firms that have been situated hitherto in the vicinity of Twenty-third street and Broadway, or south thereof, are moving to locations on or near Fifth avenue. The latest accession to the number of important shops which have moved farther north is McCutcheon's linen store. A few weeks before, Brentano's announced its intention of deserting Union Square and of occupying a corner of Fifth avenue in the thirties. A large number of the best general stores in the city, such as Arnold & Constable, Lord & Taylor, Aiken's and Vantine's, still remain south of Twenty-third street, and the same is true of certain prominent shops that sell special lines of goods, such as Brooks Bros., W. & J. Sloane and the like. But it looks as if their removal were only a matter of time. They may not feel the comparative disadvantages of their location during good times, but when trade begins to slacken, they will find that they will suffer in comparison with their competitors who occupy more accessible locations farther north. Business men, who have neglected early in the game to understand the drift of trade, often fight a tendency of this kind very hard, particularly when they find that their delay has forced them to pay higher for locations in the new districts than did their competitors who preceded them, but they are obliged eventually to succumb.

There are a number of salient reasons why a location north of Twenty-third street along the line of Fifth avenue is particularly available for special shops. These reasons do not apply to the department stores, that are situated on Sixth avenue for reasons which will be indicated later; but they are peculiarly applicable to shops which sell a high grade of goods to well-to-do customers. Such customers live for the most part on the upper East Side and do their shopping in carriages; and it is becoming more and more inconvenient to reach a location south of Twenty-third street in a carriage during the winter, and especially during a snowy winter traffic on Twenty-third street is very much congested and carriages are subjected to annoying delays. A point on or near Fifth avenue, north of Madison Square, is, on the other hand, easily reached, and it can be reached without much driving in and around trolley cars. Furthermore, the comparative availability of upper Fifth avenue is not simply a matter of accessibility. South of Twenty-third street is gradually becoming a wholesale district, and a wholesale district is not a pleasant one for shoppers. The streets are full of slow-moving trucks, the sidewalks are frequently littered with boxes; and the shop windows in such neighborhoods are no longer interesting. The wholesale and retail districts should and must keep as near together as possible, but they must, nevertheless, remain dis-ting; and the intrusion of wholesale business into every nook and corner of the more important streets south of Twenty-third street is not to be denied.

For ten years past large loft buildings have been in process of construction on lower Fifth avenue, until now there are very few streets south of Twenty-third street, that remain unoccupied. The side streets running off from Fifth avenue have been subject to a similar process of reconstruction. At first the reconstruction did not travel farther than Fourth avenue on the East and Sixth avenue on the West, but recently it looks as if the wholesale and light manufacturing buildings would spread as far west as Seventh avenue, or even as Eighth avenue. In the mean time the invasion of the wholesale trade made for a while little headway on Broadway just south of Twenty-third street, because nearly all the good locations on that thoroughfare were otherwise occupied. During the last few years, however, it has been evident that the wholesale trade was gaining at the expense of the retailers; and there can be little doubt that the process which took place during the last generation south of Fourteenth street will be repeated during the present generation between Fourteenth and Twenty-third streets. Indeed, it is likely to be carried along still farther. Broadway between Twenty-third and Thirty-second streets seems also destined to the same end. No big loft buildings have actually been constructed within that area; but several of them are foreshadowed. The theatres, the restaurants and the hotels on that part of Broadway no longer do as well as they once did, and the concentration of the amusement-purveyors in the neighborhood of Long Acre Square is becoming so emphatic that in a little while Daly's and Wallack's Theatres and the older hotels will go the way of Niblo's Garden. Their place can be taken only by big loft buildings. This destiny for Broadway up to Thirty-second street becomes the more certain when we remember that the side streets to the west of Broadway are already being occupied by the wholesale trade, which in this vicinity is likely to spread as far west as Eighth avenue. It will probably take as much as ten years or even more to occupy the whole of the territory described above; but it is evident that during the next decade Broadway will be the line of growth for the wholesale trade.

During this same period the line of expansion of the retail trade is also plainly marked. Fifth avenue and the side streets will continue to be the one possible location for stores which appeal especially to well-to-do customers. The more popular of these stores will be concentrated in the vicinity of Thirty-fourth street, but, nevertheless, Thirty-fourth street will never become precisely what Twenty-third street has been until recently. Only two general dry-goods stores have so far found locations in that neighborhood; and it would be so impossible to piece out another large site in that vicinity in case any of the other dry-goods stores of a high class wish to move, they will have to seek a different location. The large department stores will continue to do business chiefly on Sixth avenue. It was the elevated road connecting directly with the prosperous West Side, which originally made that avenue available for big stores, and there is no reason to suppose that it will lose its desirability for this purpose. The present Subway has, indeed, altered somewhat the line of traffic; but so far this alteration has not affected the retail trade. Before it has any chance to do so, the New Jersey Tunnel Co. will be running cars under Sixth avenue to the immense advantage of its shops, and, if the Seventh avenue and Broadway subways are constructed, they will give the department stores the underground connections they need with the West Side and with Washington Heights. The consequence is that, if any new stores are needed during the next ten years they will probably be situated on Sixth avenue, between Twenty-third and Thirty-second streets. Property values on that part of Sixth avenue have largely been increased recently with such a consummation obviously in mind. In a way those streets will be even more available than the ones already occupied farther south, because of their proximity to the Long Island and Pennsylvania Terminal. The only prominent exceptions to the concentration of the big retail stores described above will be Bloomingdale's at Fifty-ninth street and Wanamaker's on lower Broadway, and neither of these exceptions is likely to be disturbed. Bloomingdale's supplies many residents of the East Side, who find it inconvenient to travel down to the lower West Side, and Wanamaker evidently believes that his comparative nearness to Brooklyn is a point in his favor. As the Subway system is developed Wanamaker's location will be more accessible from other parts of the city, and he also will have the advantage of a connection with the New Jersey trolley tunnel.

The Structure of Cities

By R. M. HURD

President of the Lawyers' Mortgage Company*

A CITY may be viewed either as a shapeless mass growing at random, or as a cohesive body responding to economic laws. The correctness of the latter view is based on the fact that a city consists of its inhabitants rather than of its buildings. From the moment the first inhabitant reaches its naked site, a city in both its physical aspect and its unseen land values is only a plastic mold reflecting the life of its inhabitants.

A study of the working of economic laws outside of cities gives an insight into their workings within. The streams of raw or manufactured products flowing together on the way to their markets create trade routes and similarly the inhabitants of a city flowing together on their daily trips to their places of business create traffic streets or city trade routes. Railroads which create cities at their terminals, and, in lesser degree, at their transfer points, have their counterpart in street railroads which draw utilities and values to their terminals, and, in lesser degree, to their street intersections. Manufacturing has the same centralizing effect, whether on a large scale it creates a city or on a small scale it builds up a district within a city. Topography operates in the same way within as without a city in causing population to flow along the same levels. Water surfaces, whether within or without a city, if navigable, facilitate the movement of population, and if non-navigable, prevent it. The law of continuity is the same, every city being a link in the chain stretching from the first settlement in a country to the last, and every growth within a city a part of the chain of development which first reaches the city from the outside and continues its life within. Finally the law of gravitation, which draws bodies together in direct proportion to their mass and in inverse proportion to their distance, operates similarly in drawing together two cities or in drawing together two sections within the same city.

The point of origin of a city is its point of contact with the outer world, this differing according to the method of transportation, if by water where deep water and a high bank meet; if by land at the intersection of turnpikes, and if by railroads at the railroad station. All growth necessarily consists of movement away from the point of origin and normally follows the line of the least resistance or greatest attraction or their resultant. The forces of attraction and resistance include topography, the underlying material; external influences, projected into the city by trade routes; internal influences, derived from located utilities, and finally the reactions and readjustments due to the continual harmonizing of conflicting elements. The influence of topography, all powerful when cities start, is constantly modified by human labor, hills being cut down, water-fronts extended, and swamps, creeks and lowlands filled in; this process, however, not taking place until the new building sites are worth more than the cost of cutting and filling.

Of a city's area from forty to seventy per cent. is used for streets. For the balance of city land there are three main uses; for business, for residences or for public buildings. Business land may be subdivided into that for distribution, for administration or for production. Retail stores either cluster at business centres or follow traffic streets. While in retailing the buyer necessarily seeks the seller, it is the seller who is most anxious to do business so that he facilitates customers by placing his shop where the largest number pass and utilizes his shop windows for catching their attention. Starting from a location which is normally convenient and attractive and having transportation facilities, the main factor in strengthening a shopping section is the business ability of the shop managers. Wholesale business may be divided into two classes; first, the selling of articles of small bulk but high value which usually seeks locations as near as possible to the retail stores, and, second, the selling of articles of great weight or bulk but small value, which seeks locations near transportation lines or termini for economy in handling, the selling being done by salesmen or agencies. Manufacturing follows similar lines to wholesaling. The administration section, as evidenced by office buildings containing the managers who carry out the complex mechanism of commercial exchange, including the functions performed by insurers, bankers, lawyers and brokers, is usually located as a result of slow growth around old exchanges and institutions.

The distribution of business utilities is solely economic, land going to the highest bidder, who is the one who can make the land earn the most. So important is it that retailers should attract customers and so great are their total profits that in all cities except the very largest (where the banking section predominates), they outbid all other utilities for the choice of locations. Next to retail stores follow along the high grade wholesalers and finishing manufacturers, and after them the wholesalers and manufacturers of heavy but cheap products, each group taking at a lower price the nearest land not bid for by the superior utility.

The location of residences is based solely on social considerations, though here also the land goes to the highest bidder. The rich secure the best locations and persons of less purchasing power take adjoining locations, and so on down the scale of wealth, the poorest workman taking the final leavings either adjacent to such nuisances as railroads, factories, or docks or distant land on the outskirts. The elements which make residence locations attractive to the rich seem to be a good approach from the business centre, absence of nuisances, moderate accessibility from the business centre, nearness to parks, a moderate elevation, and finally favorable transportation facilities. Residence land varies in value according to the social standing of its occupants. As regards multiple dwellings, their basis of distribution is partly economic and partly social, but conforms chiefly to the principles governing business property. Hotels of various grades seek locations similar to retail stores of various grades, while the best apartment houses seek locations in the fashionable districts, from which the various classes of flats and tenements grade down.

The building changes in a city are of two main classes, one the erection of buildings within a city and the other the addition of buildings at its circumference. A successful business at the centre of a city which requires more space has three alternatives before it: it can build higher in the air, purchase adjoining land or move away from the centre. To build higher in the air solves the problem in the administration section, but is only a partial solution in the shopping district, where frontage on the street is necessary. Whichever of the two alternatives is accepted, either of buying adjacent land or moving further away, the result is the same; namely, a starting of the slow but endless procession away from the centre of a city. In this outward movement the original location of the earliest fashionable residence district is of chief importance, since it draws behind it the best retail stores.

All growth is either axial or central, axial growth occurring first in some cities and central growth in others, but each including the other. Axial growth is the result of transportation facilities and is based on accessibility. Central growth consists of the clustering of utilities around some point of attraction and is based on proximity. A never ending contest exists between axial growth pushing out from the centre of a city along lines of transportation, and central growth, which steadily follows and obliterates it. The normal resultant of these two forces is a star shaped city, the many exceptions to this form being due chiefly to topography.

Axial growth, based on transportation facilities, namely, water courses, turnpikes and railroads, forms the frame work of a city. In water-front cities, the first line of growth is parallel to the water and the first line of docks. In an inland city there are normally four directions of growth along the lines of intersecting turnpikes, whose relative importance depends upon the attracting strength of the outlying territory with which the city is thus connected. Historically, turnpikes have overshadowed all other influences on city structure, forming the principal street in all cities through which they ran, and also the first outlet for residences forced away from the business centre. Growth only continued along these turnpikes to the point where the inconvenience of living so far out more than offset the attractions, when other streets were laid out. Steam railroads affect city land in three ways; first, by their terminals; second, by their lines as barriers to city extension, and third, by their lines as adjacent neighbors. Railroad terminals, owing to the large daily travel which they attract, have a centralizing effect in attracting hotels and shops. Railroad lines as barriers cut off and ostracize large sections of territory from a city's area, this effect being most marked in the highest grade property.

The basis of the influence of transportation facilities on the growth of a city is the amount and regularity of the daily travel which they promote. The inhabitants of a city do not intermingle at random throughout a city's area, but in going from one place to another seek the quickest, shortest or most agreeable route. The daily movements throughout a city consist of the trips of business men between their residences and their business places, the interweaving of these men within the business centre, the trips of workmen between their homes and their workshops, the trips of women in shopping and calling, and finally the evening trips of all classes to places of amusement. The effects of currents of daily travel in attracting shops depend upon the number of people passing, their purchasing power, the causes which bring them past the property, and their method of locomotion. In general the influence of daily travel is due to the laws of chance by which a certain proportion of people passing a shop window will become customers.

Quite clearly, passersby are of diminishing importance in proportion to their lack of purchasing power and also in proportion to the eagerness which they have to reach a distant point. The daily current of travel in a city is the strongest force affecting

Elevated Loop Could Be Noiseless and Not Ugly

A Design that Would Satisfy Delancey Street—Features of the New Track Plan to be Built into the Brooklyn Bridge

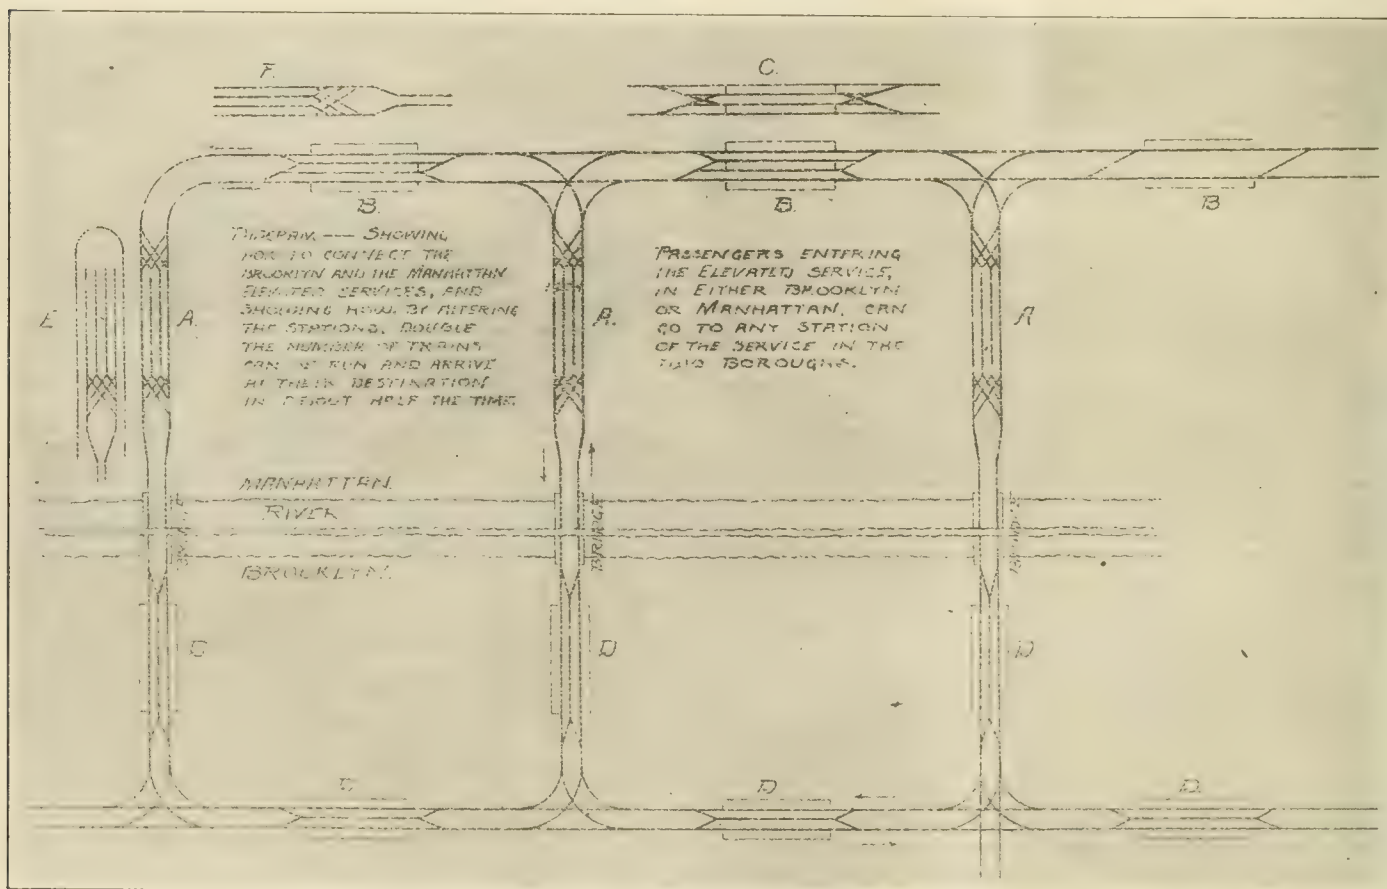

THERE is, at this time, much discussion about the elevated loop suggested by Commissioner Stevenson to connect the Brooklyn elevated service with that of Manhattan, and the objection raised by the people living in Delancey street is that an elevated structure is ugly and noisy and is, therefore, a great detriment to the surrounding property. The present elevated services in the two boroughs are ugly and sometimes very ugly, and are always noisy. That, however, can be easily remedied, and I have here made a sketch showing how an elevated railroad can be constructed without being ugly; and if the floor of the structure is filled in with a material which is a poor conductor of sound, and the tracks and sleepers built on top of that, the road will be almost noiseless.

By way of contrast, I enclose a picture of the elevated structure over the plaza in Brooklyn near the entrance to the bridge. Some ten or twelve years ago, Brooklyn wanted a handsome entrance to the bridge, and spent a great deal of money to clear away the buildings so as to have a plaza right at the bridge entrance; the picture shows what they got—about as ugly an elevated structure as could be conceived, and the strange part of it is that none of this (and a good deal more like it) was necessary.

The same mistake was made at the Brooklyn terminal as was made at the Manhattan terminal—everything was turned the wrong way about. That mistake has not only cost the railroad a great deal of money and disfigured that section of the city, but it has also caused a great deal of discomfort to the passengers using the terminal. Part of it is like the Manhattan terminal; during the rush hours it is overcrowded in spots, and the biggest part of the terminal is not used at all.

For more than four years I have had a plan before the Bridge Department, which, if it were installed, would end the present disgraceful and barbarous conditions that daily exist at the two terminals during the rush hours; besides, it would improve the appearance of both the entrances to the bridge. Instead of being an item of expense, it would be an income to the city, as it would release several blocks near the bridge entrance in Brooklyn; and, instead of being burdened with the fearful structures that are there now, these structures could be removed and the place put to better use, thus paying for the alterations many times over.

THE PROPOSED RAILROAD LINK BETWEEN THE TWO CITIES.

"A."—Shows a station where the elevated trains of Brooklyn and Manhattan meet. Tracks 1 and 3 are assigned to the Manhattan service and 2 and 4 to the Brooklyn service. Passengers coming from Brooklyn and wishing to continue through the Borough of Manhattan need only cross a platform and board a Manhattan train and vice versa. And as soon as the two companies agree to run over each other's tracks it is ready for through service. In case there is a delay on one of the bridges the service can immediately be shunted to another bridge.

"B."—Shows how the stations in Manhattan can be altered so as to enable the Brooklyn trains to come over to the Borough of Manhattan and go from one bridge to another without interfering with the Manhattan service. At each station a central platform with sidings will be built. The Manhattan trains will stop at their platforms as they do now, but they will be followed by a Brooklyn train, which will stop at the central platform, and when the Manhattan train leaves, it will be followed by the Brooklyn train. The two trains will not interfere with each other, and the service of the line will have been doubled. There are only three stations between Park Row and Delancey street to be altered.

"C."—Shows a station with two island platforms, which will also enable them to run Brooklyn trains together with Manhattan trains without interfering with each other and double the service.

"D."—Shows Brooklyn stations. By adding an additional track between two stations it will be possible, say, on the Fifth Avenue line, for the Coney Island trains to stop at every alternate station and the Bay Ridge trains to stop at the stations between them. By that means the Brooklyn Rapid Transit will be able to run about twice as many trains on their service and carry the passengers to their destination in about half the time that they do now.

"E."—Shows how the elevated service for terminal passengers from Brooklyn can land on the ground floor. It also shows how the trolley passengers in coming from Brooklyn unload on the north side on a platform the same as used for the elevated, so as to avoid the high step. The empty cars go on an elevated track over the heads of the passengers and stop on the south side to be loaded from a platform.

"F."—Shows how the terminal passengers for the Borough of Manhattan service can enter their trains on the ground floor. There will be no stair-climbing connected with the whole service. Terminal passengers will be separated from the through passengers. The upper floor will be used entirely as a transfer and way station and the lower floor as a terminal. All Brooklyn trains will come direct to the Borough of Manhattan. There will be no changing of cars at the Brooklyn terminal. All stations are so arranged that in case of a blockade on any part of the road it will throw only that part out of service, as each station can be used as a terminal station; that is, any train will be able to return on the opposite track.

The key to the whole situation is the present terminal at the New York end of the Brooklyn Bridge, but in a few weeks that can be so altered that all Brooklyn trains can come to New York during the rush hours as well as they do now during the non-rush hours, and besides double the number of cars that are now running.

The apparent reason that nothing has been done with the plan proposed more than four years ago is that the Bridge Department had several objections which finally narrowed down to one—a very vital one. They said that not so many cars could be handled with the system proposed as are now handled at the bridge, but they had facts before them which disproved their statement.

However, as soon as Borough President Coler was elected he took steps to inform himself in regard to this plan for relief, and, after an investigation, he was satisfied that relief could be had; and as soon as Bridge Commissioner Stevenson was appointed, President Coler arranged that we should meet in his office and I should then explain the plan to the Commissioner. This I did, and the Commissioner said that as soon as his chief engineer was appointed he would take the matter up with him. As I was going abroad just at that time, I left the matter in the hands of the Borough President and the Bridge Commissioner.

When I returned I learned that during my absence some engineers of the Bridge Department and of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company had taken it upon themselves to practically illustrate to the Commissioner and to his chief engineer that the plan proposed was no good. About the middle of March they had a trial of the plan at Coney Island and called it a failure, as, they said, only forty-nine trains could be operated per hour with the proposed system, while on the bridge they could operate from fifty-four to fifty-six trains per hour. Of course, if that was all there was to it, it would be a failure; it was called a failure in the newspapers, and the public had good reason to believe that it was a failure. But they neglected to state that at the trial they operated forty-nine six-car trains, or 294 cars, while at the bridge they operated fifty-six four-car trains, or 224 cars; or that, in other words, with the proposed system they operated seventy more cars per hour. Again, they neglected to say that the time for unloading and loading the trains could be increased from half a minute (the time they now have at the bridge) to four minutes (the time they could have according to the Coney Island test), and as the insufficient time allotted to the passengers for leaving and entering the cars is the main trouble at the bridge, it is a pity they forgot to mention that fact. They also forgot to mention that in using six-car trains all Brooklyn trains could come to Manhattan during the rush hours as well as they do now during the non-rush hours, thereby saving the passengers the annoyance of changing cars in Brooklyn, to climb stairs, wait and fight to get into a train a second time. The trial, therefore, instead of being a failure, as they called it, was a great success.

Fortunately, neither the Bridge Commissioner nor his chief engineer was misled by it, for, shortly after that the Commissioner publicly announced that he had instructed his chief engineer to prepare plans for relief on the line of the Poulson plan. If, instead of making the test at Coney Island, they had examined the present terminal to see what could be done, all they need to have done was to see how long it would take a train to leave its pocket and how long it would take another train to take its place. As it is a very simple problem, based upon facts, I will state what can be done.

With the present system the traffic is limited to the capacity of the terminal; after the improvements are made it will be limited only by the capacity of the bridge itself. The terminal facilities can be many times in excess of the capacity of the bridge, and if the terminal is altered as proposed, and it is made a double-decker with the ground floor for the terminal passengers and the present floor for the through and transfer passengers, the capacity of the terminal will be 180 six-car trains per hour for the upper floor and 180 six-car trains for the lower floor, a total of 360 trains, or 2,160 cars, nearly ten times as many cars as are now operated; but, as the capacity of the bridge would probably be only 400 or 500 cars per hour, it shows that the capacity of a properly planned terminal is far in excess of the capacity of the bridge itself. If a confirmation of those figures be needed, it can be gotten from the chief engineer of the Bridge Department.

A diagram herewith shows how the elevated railroad services of the two boroughs can be connected; if the two companies cannot come to an agreement whereby one can use the tracks of the other, the elevated stations, where they meet, can be so arranged that each company has an alternate track, and the passengers need only step across a platform to change from the Brooklyn to the Manhattan trains, and vice versa; and if, at any time, they can agree to use each other's tracks, everything is ready. Besides, by a slight alteration of the platforms in the stations, many more trains can be operated, and, if alternate trains stop at alternate stations, each train would be able to get to the end of its route in about half the time it consumes now. It is safe to say to the people of Brooklyn, who have suffered so long, that if the plan is carried out on a line of what has been proposed they will be entirely relieved from the present barbarous conditions, there will be no stair-climbing connected with the whole system, terminal passengers will enter their trains on the ground floor and the through passengers will merely have to change cars on the upper floor, the traffic will be divided in about half, the incoming and outgoing passengers will be separated, there will be no changing of cars at the Brooklyn terminal, and the passengers will arrive at their destination in about half the time they do now.

The alterations at the Brooklyn terminal can be done now, and relief can be had in a few weeks. The alterations can be made in advance of connecting the elevated service of the two boroughs.

Sheehan, 136 Liberty st, Manhattan, that firm has let the contract for the engines to the Watertown Engine Co., and for the electrical equipment to the Fort Wayne Electric Co.

BUILDING NOTES

June was a light month from the standpoint of orders for structural steel for buildings.

Four and one-half million dollars for the erection of school buildings has been authorized by the Board of Aldermen.

George A. Just, a well-known consulting engineer and expert in steel structures, announces the removal of his offices to 239 Vernon av, Borough of Queens, New York.

The new skyscraper building on the site of the old Boreel Building, at Broadway and Cedar st, southwest corner, has been officially designated as "The United States Realty Building."

A notable instance of the rapid erection of structural steel work was afforded in the building of the Ward Line pier. Including five days of lost time the work was completed in 16 calendar days. The pier is 527½ ft. long, 76 ft. wide and has a 2-sty section 74½ ft. long.

Washington Hull, who has accepted $15,000 in settlement of his claim against the city for drawing plans for the proposed municipal building in Brooklyn, had justice on his side in the opinion of Corporation Counsel Delany. Mr. Hull's plans were accepted after competition and the contract was binding on the city.

During the first six months of the present year, 453 building loan contracts were filed with the County Clerk of New York, aggregating $27,083,784. During the month of June, 1906, there were filed 84 building loan contracts, aggregating $2,810,084, as against 435 filed the same month last year, aggregating $33,194,272, which is but 18 loans less than were filed for the first six months of this year, and $6,110,488 in excess of what was loaned during the entire first six months of this year.

It is probable that the Erie Railroad will not immediately build the terminal and shops contemplated for Jersey City, as the plans that have been prepared so far for the terminal especially are being held up until some determination is reached as to whether the company will continue to ferry its passengers or arrange some other method of getting them across the river. The shops which it was proposed to erect at Bergen Hill are also in the doubtful stage regarding just when they are to be constructed.

The oldest dealer in masons' building materials to-day (and more active than ever) is Nathaniel Wise, who has stood the vicissitudes of the building trade for over fifty years. Mr. Wise in late years has been ably assisted by his two sons, Frank E. and Charles G., now well and favorably known in the building trade. Mr. Wise has recently incorporated his business into the Nathaniel Wise Company, with himself as president, Frank E. Wise as vice-president and treasurer, and Charles G. Wise as secretary. With a large yard on the East River front, extending from 79th to 80th sts, excellent dock facilities and a large stock and equipment, no order is too large or too small for them to handle, and with their usual prompt attention. Their telephone number is 1567—79th st.

A notable patent floor has just been laid in the Chelsea Hotel, at Steeplechase Park, Rockaway Beach, Long Island, by the Sedgwick-Flower Co., 1133 Broadway. This floor, which is made of "Ideal-Monolith," has a pattern in six colors—blue, black, red, buff, gold and white—and is remarkable for the way in which each color is worked in. The fleur de lis is used to good effect in the color scheme, as are also ten-point stars and a double border. The company has just obtained the contract to lay thirty-three kitchen floors for the Fluri Construction Co., at 159th st and Broadway. The most characteristic things about "Ideal-Monolith" are its cheapness, in comparison with other sanitary flooring, and its resiliency and pliability. It can be made as hard as stone or as soft and pliable as wood.

Particulars Concerning No. 112 Wall St.

Editor Record and Guide.

In reference to so many conflicting reports as to 112 Wall st, I beg to state the following:

This property was not really sold since January 29, 1874. Philip Dater and wife and James Dater sold to Fred Lyman. Mr. F. Lyman's estate was interested in this property, and I saw recorded a sale to them. I personally represented the present owners, and purchased same from George E. Coney—their attorney, in fact, as well as B. W. Wells, attorney for his wife.

We bought this property, resold it, but retained a half interest. Have at present no equity, except we will have a handsome profit. I wish to deny the statement that Felix Isman was or is interested in the matter, although he was offered it, and said it was a good parcel to keep, having a future.

I thank you for your kindness in giving this proper space.

The Structure of Cities.

its structure. If of large amount and great regularity it is certain to convert any street into a retail shopping street, this process emphasizing the second function of a city street which first furnishes communication and later, frontage for buildings. One of the effects of the changing size, shape and location of various specialized districts is the influence which such changes have in relocating the chief axis of travel. This is most clearly seen in a water front city, where the best retail street has normally changed from being parallel to the water front to being at right angles to it. The general effect of improved transportation is to add value to the circumference of a city by rendering it accessible for residences and to the centre of a city by concentrating traffic within it, a part of this added value being removed from the intermediate zone. By increasing the area of the supply of land the value of all competitive land is reduced, the area increasing not in proportion to the distance but in proportion to the square of the distance. Every improvement in construction of street railroads strengthens their hold on the city's structure and increases the productive efficiency of the population. Bridges, ferries and tunnels introduce the competition of new outlets and traffic routes, which change the framework of a city in proportion to their success in controlling currents of travel.

Central growth has two main aspects; first, general growth in all directions from the point of origin, and second, local growth around sub-centres within the city, such as transportation, termini, public buildings, exchanges, factories and hotels. As a city grows the centralizing influence of public buildings steadily diminishes, while its exchanges assume increasing importance, these varying in character according to the leading business transacted in the city. Normal growth consists of the gradual aggregation of buildings of the same character due to the gregariousness of mankind and the saving in time from the close juxtaposition of buildings. Continuity is a vital feature of all growth, whether central or axial, every break causing a weakness in the structure similar to the loss of a link in a chain. In internal movement which constantly goes on is the gathering together of similar forms of business into special districts.

The fundamental conformity of all cities to the same laws is shown by the order of dependence of one district upon another being the same in all cities. Whatever the size or shape of a city, as it grows the various residence sections move farther away from the business centre and are continually followed by retail stores of various classes, which are in turn followed by the wholesale and finishing houses, all pursuing their customers. Behind the wholesalers come the banking, office and administration sections, who are conservative about changes and are held in old locations by established exchanges and by the large capital expended for office buildings. More or less mixed in with these well defined districts are special buildings of various sorts, while clubs, churches, hospitals, hotels and boarding houses form a zone between the residence districts and the business centre.

There are three main causes of changes in a city's structure; increase of population, increase of wealth and new transportation facilities. Increase of population without increase of wealth would normally tend only to a gradual extension of buildings of the existing character over a larger area. Increase of wealth, however, causes continual rebuilding within the city, old-fashioned shops, dingy offices and plain residences being supplanted by buildings of a new standard of magnificence. New and improved methods of transportation draw residences beyond the city's limits, concentrate business in higher buildings at the centre and establish new axes of travel as additional vertebrae for the city. More and more in the life of great cities is improved transit of importance, the tendency being for traffic to mass at intersecting points with inferior utilities in the quiet side streets. Among the minor causes of change in city structure should be classed new inventions, the elevator, for example, rendering it possible to utilize buildings higher than six or eight stories, and skeleton steel construction rendering thirty to forty story buildings possible. After new inventions, new habits and customs are of chief importance, for example, longer summer absences from the city diminishing the importance of shopping streets, while the enormous increase in travel strengthens the centralizing influence of hotels, and the steady movement from residences to apartments concentrates population in small area, and by substituting showy buildings for larger living space augments the power of capital to attract. As long as changes in habits, customs, fashions and tastes continue to occur, cities will inevitably continue to reflect them.

Frank A. O'Donnell, president of the Tax Board, died Thursday night at his home, 223 East 17th st, after an illness of two weeks. He was 54 years old. In 1894-6 he was State senator, and in 1903 was elected treasurer of Tammany Hall. He was a member and once president of Anawanda Club, the Tammany organization in C. F. Murphy's district. Mayor McCallan appointed him president of the Tax Board in his first term, and reappointed him last January.

Expenses of the Anti-Mortgage Tax Campaign.

Very properly the Allied Real Estate interests through their secretary make a statement herewith of all the costs and expenses attendant upon the campaign which ended so successfully in the overthrow of the Annual Mortgage Tax Law, a victory which will directly save millions of dollars to the small property owners, and which will tend in due time to work great benefit to the real estate interests of the whole State. Incidentally it may be remarked that it appears from the statement that the total cost to the association was in the neighborhood of only $20,000. It is very evident that the work was carried on with commendable economy as well as with cleverness, precision and honor.

From January 1, 1906, to May 22, 1906, the work of the Allied Real Estate Interests of the State of New York consisted chiefly in carrying on a campaign throughout the State to secure the passage of the act entitled "An act to amend the tax law in relation to the taxation of mortgages of real property." It is difficult to differentiate between the expenses incident to that campaign and the necessary expenses connected with maintaining the organization, which is a permanent one. In addition to an office force consisting of eight employees, there were two traveling representatives, who covered nearly every portion of the State, and the second vice-president, who represented the association in Albany before the Legislature and the Governor. The association retained the Hon. William N. Cohen, of New York City, to redraft the original measure to conform to the suggestions of the Governor in his memorandum in vetoing the bill as first passed.

ALLAN ROBINSON,
Secretary Allied Real Estate Interests of the State of New York.
June 28, 1906.

STATE OF NEW YORK, }
COUNTY OF NEW YORK, } ss:
Allan Robinson, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is Secretary of the Allied Real Estate Interests of the State of New York, a membership corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, that the statement annexed hereto, entitled "Statement of Expenses and Disbursements of the Allied Real Estate Interests of the State of New York, from August 9, 1905, to June 28, 1906," is a true and complete statement of all the expenses and disbursements of said corporation since its incorporation; that during the first five months of its existence the work of said corporation consisted chiefly in securing a large membership, the expense incident thereto amounting to more than $5,000; that since January 1, 1906, said corporation has conducted a campaign of education throughout the State to secure the passage of the Mortgage Recording Tax Law, the expense of which has amounted to less than $20,000, exclusive of a bill for services rendered by counsel in connection with the redrafting of the legislative bill, as set forth in said statement; that the annexed statement shows all disbursements paid, incurred or promised to counsel or agents in connection with the passage of the act entitled "An act to amend the tax law in relation to the taxation of mortgages of real property" (Chapter 532, Laws of 1906) except as hereinbefore stated.
Sworn to before me this 29th day of June, 1906.

ALFRED L. CURTIS,
Notary Public, No. 135, New York County.

Brick values have continued in the downward scale this week, and the market is decidedly unsettled. Eight dollars and a quarter is the extreme price now obtainable in the wholesale market. The manufacturers charge that the builders and dealers have entered into a conspiracy to bear the market.

The New Mortgage Law.

With the beginning of business this week the new law for a recording tax on mortgages went into effect. The old annual mortgage tax law ceased to be operative on Saturday. There is now no further tax on mortgages which paid the full tax at the time of recording. On demand mortgages, where no tax was paid at time of recording, the full tax must be paid before July 30. Short term mortgages, for example, ten, twenty and thirty-day mortgages, now past due, which paid taxes for these terms only, must pay the balance due to June 30 on or before July 30.

Holders of all mortgages, not exempt by their nature, such as religious and eleemosynary organizations, recorded after July 1, 1905, and before July 1, 1906, must pay a mortgage tax of one-half of 1 per cent. a year, or pro rata for any fraction thereof. In event of this tax not being paid before July 30 a penalty of 1 per cent. a month on the amount of the tax due is charged. In regard to the collection of the tax under the Laws of 1905, the law remains active until the tax is collected, and mortgages remain subject to all penalties under the 1905 law. There is no longer an annual taxation.

Persons in doubt as to the status of their mortgages in regard to taxation should apply to the Register of their county; or of the county in which the document was filed, giving the date of record, the serial number and the name of the mortgagor, when they will be promptly informed by mail. In event of the owner not having this information, the mortgage tax record books will be found in the office of the Register, where they are open for public inspection, and one may examine these books or locate his mortgage, and so very easily ascertain whether all due taxes have been paid.

Holders of total advance mortgages filed before July 1, 1906, will not be relieved of personal taxation by the 1905 laws. Under the recording tax law of 1906, an owner of a mortgage, by paying one-half of 1 per cent. of the principal indebtedness at the date of recording is relieved from personal taxation on the valuation of said mortgage.

On Monday in the Register's office, 78 satisfaction pieces were filed, and 245 mortgages and deeds.

On Tuesday 166 satisfaction pieces, and 766 mortgages and deeds.

On Thursday 110 satisfaction pieces and 450 mortgages and deeds.

The extra large number of satisfaction pieces filed is taken to signify that a good proportion of mortgages are to be made over so as to come under the new law.

The week's filings in the New York County Register's office for deeds, mortgages, assignments of mortgages and satisfied mortgages for the past six days, compared with the corresponding days in 1905, are totaled in the following table:

Assessment for the Grand Boulevard and Concourse.

The commissioners in the condemnation proceedings for the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, in the Borough of the Bronx, have submitted to the Supreme Court a preliminary report.

Under the law providing for the Grand Boulevard and Concourse the area of Bronx property to be assessed extends from the Harlem River to Spuyten Duyvil on the westward, with the northerly line along West 240th st to Van Cortlandt Park, following the boundary line of the park to its southeast corner at Jerome av and Gun Hill road, along Gun Hill road to the Bronx River, along the westerly side of the Bronx River to Pelham av, along Pelham av to the Southern Boulevard, to East 189th st, to Prospect av, along Prospect av to its intersection with 149th st, thence along the Southern Boulevard to St. Ann's av, to the Bronx Kills at its junction with the Harlem River.

There are 80,000 city lots within the area of assessment. This property is owned by 30,000 persons and corporations. The assessment, of course, will be highest on property immediately adjacent to the Grand Boulevard and Concourse. The assessment roll fills two big volumes of about one thousand pages each.

The commissioners are John H. Knoepfel, Hugh R. Garden and William Endemann. The assessment to be levied against each of the most valuable lots of 25x100 ft. on the concourse will be $450, and the smallest amount for concourse lots will be $240. Lots at a distance will pay proportionately less. As the city treasury pays three-fourths of the cost the lot assessments to be borne by the owners of the property facing the Grand Boulevard and Concourse will range from $112.50 to $60 each, according to location.

The amount of awards to be given for land taken is $2,445,-257. The cost of the proceedings, including the payment of commissioners' fees, realty experts and other incidentals has been $215,434. The amount of the preliminary assessments, which will be charged against two-thirds of the property in the borough and against the city treasury jointly, has been placed at $3,030,868. Three-fourths of this assessment will be paid by the city at large, and one-quarter will be charged against Bronx property owners, making the amount to be raised by assessment in the Bronx $757,717.

All the figures, records and maps of the condemnation commissioners are now open to inspection and objection in the offices of the Street Opening Bureau, Nos. 90 and 92 West Broadway. Property owners may file objections to assessments any time prior to July 21. Hearings on these objections will begin on July 25, at three o'clock in the afternoon. Unless objections are made to the Commissioners' reports they will move to have them formally confirmed by the Supreme Court on November 22 next. After the report is confirmed the assessments will stand as liens against all property involved within the area described.

Assessed Value of Real Estate is $5,738,487,245, a Slight Increase.

The Board of Taxes and Assessments sent to the Board of Aldermen this week the rolls of the assessment of real and personal property for taxation for the current year. The books will be open in the office of the City Clerk for public inspection. The increase in the assessed value of real estate this year is $515,904,944, which is sufficient to bring about a slight reduction in the tax rate. The record of the assessment fills 258 large books. The official figures of the real and personal assessments by boroughs for 1905 and 1906, as issued by the Tax Department, are as follows:

Regarding the new hotel about to be built in Brooklyn, it will be on lots aggregating 80x204 on the block bounded by Montague, Hicks and Remsen sts. Part of the site is where the old Pierpont House stood. The hotel will be 14 stories high, will be of light limestone and brick, and is to cost $1,500,000. It will be known as the "Woodruff," and Henry J. Somborn and H. E. Corey, of Brooklyn, are largely interested in the enterprise. The main entrance will be on Hicks st. Henry C. Pelton, of Manhattan, is the architect, and the building is to be completed within a year. It is to be a first-class house in every respect, with all up-to-date improvements. The tariff for rooms is fixed at $2.50 upwards. In connection with the projected tunnel under Montague st, it is said that there is to be a station just by the new hotel, which, of course, will be of immense advantage and convenience to its patrons and to the neighborhood generally, giving residents ready transit to that point and all points of New York and Brooklyn.

PRIVATE SALES MARKET

The quietness of the week in real estate is generally ascribed to the holiday and the attendant vacations, in combination with the effects of the new Mortgage law and the relaxation customary in real estate at this season. The premier purchase of the week is to be credited to the Erie Land & Improvement Co., of a square on the Harlem, to be utilized as a freight yard. The transaction is not only significant of the steadily growing importance of the Harlem River as a business center, but also of a new spirit of enterprise lately discernible in the Erie Co. In this connection it may be observed that the large terminal constructions which the Erie has contemplated for Jersey City are being held in abeyance for the reason that the company entertains the hope and expectation of obtaining tunnel facilities to and a terminal in this borough. It is known that the directorate has been in negotiation with the McAdoo tunnel interests with this object in view, and that as the board has been disappointed thus far in making an arrangement it is casting about to see what can be done to get the Erie's passengers across the river without dependence upon ferries.

The first day's filings under the new recording tax for mortgages came on Monday, when a large volume of business was transacted in the Register's office, and the week's work, even with the loss of one day, has continued to be heavy, in contrast with the preceding week's. A large share of the conveyances and accompanying mortgages are due to the recent auction sales of lots. Independence Day was a busy one in the lot market of Queens. Visitors to the various plottings were numerous, and two large auction sales were cried. Two of the four sales scheduled for the Manhattan auction room on Monday were adjourned. A further decline in the price of brick is noted for the week, and the manufacturers are becoming alarmed. Good brick are now obtainable in the wholesale market for from $7.50 to $8.25.

BROAD ST.—The southeast corner of Broad and Beaver sts was purchased on Friday by the Consolidated Stock Exchange as a site for its new home. The plot fronts 99.8 ft on Broad st and 117.1 ft on Beaver. The southerly line is 136.7 ft and the westerly 99.2 ft, making a total plot of 12,000 square feet. The price paid is given at $900,000. Robt. E. Dowling, the Century Realty Co, and the City Real Estate Investing Co. jointly owned the plot, each holding a one-third interest. Negotiations for the sale have been under way for some time. The buyers placed a value of $70 a sq ft on the land, making a total value of $840,000. The owners' appraisal was at $75 a sq ft, making a total of $900,000. The appraisal of an outside expert placed the value at $80 to the sq ft, or for the parcel $960,000. After considerable negotiation the middle rate was agreed upon. The Bronx.

Since Greeley's Era.

150TH ST.—After two years of negotiation the American Real Estate Co. has succeeded in purchasing the valuable property owned by Hugh Martin on the southwest corner of 150th st and Melrose av, 100x100. In 1853 this property was owned by Horace Greeley, founder of the New York Tribune, and was sold by him for a few hundred dollars. On the west and adjoining this property in 150th st they have purchased from Eliza Wolski 50x100, and from the Hanaberger estate 25x100 on the rear and facing 149th st, they have purchased from George Kohler 50x80. In addition to what they already own, this gives them what is considered one of the most valuable business properties in the Bronx, and consists of the block front on Melrose av, from 149th to 150th sts, and 175 ft. on each street, on which they intend to erect a 7-sty department store building. Direct connection will be made with the 149th st station of the subway. The plans are out and they expect to start work at once. Eugene J. Busher was the broker in all the transactions.

REAL ESTATE NOTES

The filings of mortgages last Saturday, the last day before the new law went into effect, were exceptionally large, caused by a desire to obtain a minimum charge under the old law. Among the larger mortgages was one from the Ripley Realty Co. to the City Investment Co., on the southeast corner of Amsterdam av and 73d st, for $365,000. Another was from the same on the southeast corner of Amsterdam av and 72d st, for $315,000. Others were: Boltan, Jacob, to North American Mortgage Co.; 63d st, south side, 250 ft. east of West End av, 150x 100, due Feb. 1, 1907, 6 per cent., $91,000; Rubin, Max, to North American Mortgage Co.; 118th st, south side, 248 ft. east of Pleasant av, 125x100.11, due Aug. 29, 1906, $90,000; Hanson, Alfred E., to George E. Ketcham; Amsterdam av, northeast corner of 159th st, 50x68, 3 years, 4½ per cent., $65,000; Dawson Realty Co. to R. S. Collins; Wales av, southeast corner

Values in Tarrytown.

TARRYTOWN-ON-THE-HUDSON.—The charms, beauties and historical associations of this village are so well known that all I can add is that there is here everything necessary to make living enjoyable.

Some of the finest estates owned and occupied by the best known families surround the village on all sides. While this fact has brought the place into prominence, it has retarded its growth, for the want of ground to spread out. However, the ex-Mayor Kingsland estate of 200 acres, situated at the north end of the village, has been acquired by the Phillips Manor Land Co. (a million-dollar corporation), and is being laid out with broad avenues, sidewalks, etc, under the supervision of Mr. E. P. Benjamin, who was largely interested in the development of Allenhurst, N. J.

This is a high grade proposition and promises much for Tarrytown.

Electric traction on the New York Central will furnish frequent service, less running time, smaller fares and especially a large increase in express trains to New York, and this will be an important factor in the future growth.

Property values have increased very slowly, but a decided change is now going on, though it is still possible to secure a modern eight to ten-room cottage on a good street from $5,000 to $8,000. Lots on Broadway command $50 a front foot; on other streets from $30 per foot; lots on the outskirts, for $100 upwards.

The best opportunities for good profits will be in business properties and possibilities. Such properties can be bought now at prices which will look small in a few years.

Altogether the prospects of Tarrytown were never so bright, so good, nor so sure as now.

A. E. BLISS.

Babylon's Best Year.

BABYLON, L. I.—Regarding real estate market in the vicinity of Babylon, the sales this year are the greatest that have ever been in the history of the township. Almost every available piece of acreage property has been turned over, and in many instances prices have advanced as much as 100 per cent. over last year.

The renting of cottages this season is better than it has been for many years. We have sold this spring a number of good properties for permanent homes, and also have had a number of inquiries from people looking for permanent homes outside of the city.

The increased cost of building material and lumber makes building quiet at the present time.

The proposed extension of the Huntington trolley to Babylon, by way of Amityville, has stimulated acreage property very much between these points, and when the road is completed, which is expected this year, there will be another rapid advance through this section, as it will make this entire territory available to the two best depots on the North and South Shores.

There are some very good plots in Babylon, 50 ft. front, that can be purchased at $600. We have a number of attractive small houses of from eight to nine room, on lots 50x150 ft., that can be sold at from $3,000 to $4,000.

JEREMIAH ROBBINS.

One of the most prominent lot transactions is the sale by John C. Tredwell to the Burroughs Realty Co. of 405 lots at Long Island City, in the Astoria section, comprising three entire blocks and all but a few lots in three others extending from Hoyt av on the south to Woolsey av on the north and from a line west of Howland st on the west to east of Lawrence st on the east and twenty-five or thirty lots north of Woolsey av. Tredwell represents the John G. Jenkins syndicate of Brooklyn and the Burroughs Realty Co. comprises the John D. Crimmins people. The property is sold subject to mortgages amounting to $160,000, and the entire tract is said to be worth $300,000. The tract, it is said, has been bought for improvement. It is near the proposed new East River Park and will be made a choice residence district. Another important sale was that of the 305 Lawson lots in Jamaica, the sale of which to the Everett Realty and Construction Co. was on a basis of $350,000.

The Record and Guide has opened an Uptown Office in the Metropolitan "Annex," Nos. 11-13 East 24th Street, in order to accommodate its customers, so many of whom are located in the central and northern parts of the city, and at the same time to provide additional quarters for its own increased staff and for the Architectural Record and "Sweet's" Index.

SUMMER dulness characterizes the stock market, which acts decidedly as though the turning-point had been passed, and without new bear ammunition it should gradually advance. The average rise in the principal stocks of three points or more since the low prices of a fortnight ago has been maintained. Money is easier, and ought to cease to be a matter of fear. In the year 1903 the same money conditions prevailed in July. Time money then was difficult to obtain, rates being 6 per cent. for even short time loans. Lenders with the recollection of the high call rates of 1902 behind them were unwilling to put out their funds on time, looking forward, if not hoping, for a repetition of the squeeze in the autumn of 1903. The result was that call money was a drag, ranging from 1½ to 2½ per cent., and the expected squeeze never came. That year the banks speculated in money and lost, and this year it is not unlikely they may do the same. The money markets of the world have often settled down into a conviction and then waited for the event that failed to materialize. Railroad earnings continue phenomenally large, and it would seem they must so continue. The absence of paralleling by reason of adverse railroad legislation leaves the existing railroads in indisputed possession of their respective fields, and so it may happen that what seemed to be for the worst may turn out to be the best for the railroads, because it is a certainty that during the first years of the working and the test of the new rate law not one dollar of capital can be obtained for a new railroad. The great good luck of the country with respect to crops continues. The wheat crop not only promises to be, with one exception, the largest in the history of the country, but the quality is the best. The figures indicated are 723,000,000 bushels. The greatest year was the harvest of 1901, when the yield was 749,000,000 bushels.

A COMPARISON of the building operations in the first half of this year with the operations of the corresponding portion of last year, as represented by the records on file, discloses that in value the works of 1906 exceed those of the first half of 1905 by some fourteen million dollars, but that in the number of new buildings projected the two periods are about equal. This is taking into account Brooklyn and the Bronx as well as Manhattan. As 1905 was the most wonderful year in building that New York has yet known, the fact that, measured by the value of the works projected, the current year has thus far surpassed it, is highly significant to business interests at large. Capacity after it has once been enlarged to meet requirements needs thereafter be fully employed in order to avert losses; and the capacity of the building and allied industries of New York has been so greatly extended of late that a lowering of the rate of building would be a serious matter. Statistics do not always reveal the full and real inwardness of things, and observation must then supplement them. In this case, it may be said that they stand for projects rather than fulfillments, and that in actual labor and material put forth there may have been, and probably was, a difference in favor of the first half of 1905 over the first half of 1906; for the letting down in some lines during the months of May and June was generally remarked, and ascribed to the effects of the new mortgage law. During the second quarter of the year plans were filed in Manhattan for 596 new buildings of a value of $39,047,430, as against 723 new buildings of a value of $35,697,212, during the second quarter of 1905. The number of tenements planned during the three months just past was 397, as against 362 in the corresponding period of 1905. The number of office buildings planned was the same in each quarter, but there was a great difference in value in favor of those planned this year. The alteration work scheduled in April, May and June of this year exceeded in value the alterations planned in the corresponding months of 1905, but affected a fewer number of buildings. The total value of the building work planned in Manhattan during the last quarter was $44,891,925, to compare with $40,915,531, which was the record made in the second quarter of 1905. For the first three months of this year the building operations of Manhattan (including both new structures and alterations) amounted in estimated cost to $40,206,746, while for the similar period in 1905 the total estimated cost of all operations in this borough was but $28,131,714. The grand total for 1906, from January 1 to July 1, of all operations in Manhattan is eighty-five million dollars, as against sixty-nine million for 1905. With the annual mortgage tax law out of existence, the difficulties connected with financing operations, so far as they were interfered with by the old law, should disappear, and with the new capital that the exempt mortgage securities of this city should attract, we can foresee nothing but a continuance of good conditions, and very probably a better record for the full year than was credited to 1905.

IT is admitted that negotiations are well advanced towards the purchase of the Burton property on Fifth avenue between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets by a retail house now doing business below Twenty-third street. It is possible that the present negotiations will fall through; but there can be no doubt that some such disposition will be made of this property. It is one of the few plots on Fifth avenue owned by one interest, which, when improved, would be large enough to accommodate the business of a big general store. Containing as it does some 27,000 square feet, it would, when improved with a ten-story building, contain abundant space for the business such as Vantine's or Arnold & Constable's, and there is not another plot on the avenue of which the same statement would be true. When Mr. Altman completed his purchases, he also secured the block front owned by the late Marshall Field, doubtless for the purpose of anticipating any possible competition; and it may be doubted whether another large plot could be pieced together except at an impossible cost. It took Mr. Altman many years of patient accumulation to buy up the site on which he is building at present, and prices have advanced considerably since he completed his purchases. The Burton plot is doubtless held at a good, stiff figure, but it was for the most part accumulated at lower prices, and its owners should be able to realize a handsome profit without asking a sum which even a large and profitable business could not afford to pay. One thing which makes it so difficult to secure a large plot on Fifth avenue is the increasing number of tall buildings that are being erected. Three years ago the avenue was improved for the most part with reconstructed four and five-story brownstone houses, but since then increasing values have compelled the building of skyscrapers, particularly on the corners; and these skyscrapers are generally leased in part for periods of twenty years or longer. The business men who several years ago had the forethought to secure permanent locations are now being rewarded, while those who neglected to do so are being correspondingly punished. The pressure is becoming so great that doubtless the tide of Fifth avenue business will soon begin to overflow not only, as at present, to the side streets, but to Madison avenue, at least between Twenty-sixth and Thirty-fourth streets. It is only necessary for some important shop to secure a location on this part of Madison avenue and the others will soon follow along.

NOW that the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has approved the routes for new subways laid out by the Rapid Transit Commission, all the legal formalities necessary to the establishing of the new routes have been complied with. What now remains to be seen is whether the new system has been framed so as to tempt private capital. Nobody expects, of course, that bidders will be found for all of the routes that have just been approved. The plan was framed at a time when active competition was expected, and since the recent merger of the two rapid transit interests, this expectation has vanished. The construction of a certain part of the new system will have to be indefinitely postponed, and the question is, what part? In the opinion of the Record and Guide, the only routes which will tempt bidders under the conditions imposed by the Elsberg amendments are those which will serve as extensions to the existing Subway. It seems manifest that the Interborough Company will be interested in the Seventh and the Lexington avenue tunnels, and can afford to take them on a lease running practically for forty-five years. On the other hand, it will be to the interest of the company to prevent the construction of the independent East and West Side tunnels. The only way in which this can be done is by offering the city excellent terms for the desired extensions, and at the same time by promising to build the new independent routes at some fixed future date. We believe that a bargain of this kind would be of advantage to the city, provided the company used its own capital and offered liberal transfer privileges. On the other hand, should the Interborough Company offer disadvantageous terms, the city should immediately prepare to construct and operate an independent belt line on Third and Eighth avenues. The city, owing to the provisions of the new law, is in an admirable position to negotiate, and if excellent terms are not obtained, it will be because the business has been badly managed.

THE removal of the Consolidated Exchange to Beaver and Broad street points the direction which the next extension of the financial district will have to take. When the buildings now being erected, or announced to be erected, are completed, the three or four blocks to the west, the east and the north of the Stock Exchange will for the most part be improved with "skyscrapers." A few large and important plots, such as the old Custom House and the J. P. Morgan corner will remain still to be improved, but the additional space which may be expected from these sources is small when compared with the total demand. New and convenient sites for skyscrapers devoted to bankers, brokers and railroads can be obtained only by taking several blocks to the south, along the line of Broad street, which are now improved with old brick buildings. The extension of the financial district in this direction will mean that the space now occupied by Custom House brokers will be contracted, and that, consequently, larger buildings will have to be erected for their accommodation still farther south. Ten years from now the whole area between the Stock and the Produce Exchanges will be covered with modern steel structures. Of course, a corresponding movement will be taking place to the north also. The demand for more room by financial interests has already forced real estate brokers to migrate farther north, and this process will be continued. The financial interest can afford to pay larger rents than can any other class of business, and it is bound to have the first choice. But for some time Broad street south of Exchange Place will be the line of the least resistance.

THE action of the Rapid Transit Commission in laying out a temporary elevated loop connecting the Manhattan terminals of the Brooklyn and Williamsburgh Bridges is, all things considered, a matter for commendation. There can be no doubt that the conditions of transit to Brooklyn are intolerable, and that there is no other hope of relief for a period of many years. The Commission has been convinced of this fact against its will, and its judgment should be taken as the best means of escaping from an intolerable situation. But in case the elevated loop is authorized as a temporary expedient, particular precaution should be taken to prevent its becoming permanent. We all know the arguments which would be used later against the abandonment of the elevated loop. It would be pointed out that traffic had become adjusted to its existence, and that the utmost public inconvenience would be caused by the sudden stoppage of a service upon which so many people depended. The only way to secure an absolutely temporary structure would be to construct it in some unpermanent way. Why should it not be made of wood? A wooden elevated loop would be cheap and safe, and it would necessarily be unpermanent. Provisions would have to be made for the eventual substitution of subways, which is just the condition which it is desired to create.

MANHATTAN BOROUGH naturally overshadows the other boroughs which comprise Greater New York by its being the center of commercial, business, social, and financial activity. All the attributes of a great metropolis as in London or Paris are centered here. Especially is this the case with theatres and hotels, there being none of the latter in the other boroughs that are of a distinctly metropolitan character. The new hotel which is about to be built in Brooklyn will, however, mark an era in edifices of this character, for the "Woodruff," which is to cost $1,500,000, is to be first class in all respects, and is to be equal in finish and up-to-date equipment to many of the higher grade hostleries in Manhattan. Fourteen stories in height, it will stand on the block bounded by Montague, Hicks and Remsen streets, part of which ground was the site of the old Pierrepont House. Particulars and details were given in the Record and Guide of last week. The erection of this important edifice only goes to show how close the boroughs of Manhattan are being brought together so as to become actually as well as in name sections of one city with equal metropolitan advantages. Bridges, tunnels and rapid transit will soon cause people to forget that the East River lies between Manhattan and Brooklyn, and residence in certain localities in Brooklyn will be more convenient for business men in the commercial section of New York City than in the case of their homes being on Manhattan Island. Certainly, if there is to be a tunnel under Montague street and a railroad station adjacent to the Hotel Woodruff, those who like the comforts of hotel life will enjoy unusual advantages in the new hostelry. Transient guests also would be able to reach the Woodruff in Brooklyn with equal and in some instances greater facility than many of the fine hotels in Manhattan.

Statistical Clerk Building Bureau.

An Interesting Foundation.

The building of the foundations for the United States Realty Building, for which the Foundation Company has the contracts, is one of the city's sights to-day. The present scheme contemplates the erection on the north side of the Trinity Building, as it now stands, an annex which is to be connected to the present building, making one complete structure, extending north from Trinity Churchyard to the new location of Thames st. The exterior foundations for this annex on the north side, when finished, will be supported by seventeen solid concrete piers carried down to bed rock by the pneumatic caisson method. The interior columns are already in position and form the northern exterior wall of the present Trinity Building. When this building was constructed, these columns were put in with the idea of making them a part of one large building when the new portion was erected and connected to it.

Thames st is to be moved about twenty-six feet and will then run along the north side of the completed building. On the north side of the newly located Thames st and extending from that street north to Cedar st, is to be erected a twin office build-columns of this structure opposite the excavation and these columns must be held from settling until the work is completed.

Then there is the shoring of the entire plot running along Cedar st. While this street is not so great a thoroughfare as Broadway, it is not very wide, and therefore the danger to the heavy buildings on the north side is not so great.

Several new engineering features are being introduced in the sinking of the caissons for these two buildings. Concrete columns are built on top of the caissons and the forms which are used to shape them are removed before the sinking of the caissons is commenced. The forms for the square caissons forming the exterior foundations are built of wood, while those for the circular caissons for the interior columns are of metal. In addition to this there are new designs of caisson shafting used for the first time on this contract. These innovations and improvements give some index to the ability and ingenuity of the engineers of the Foundation Company, who are doing the work.

One of the conditions required is that the foundations must be completed in a very short time. To comply with these conditions the Foundation Company has equipped the job with a double set of plants, machinery and men, throughout. The laying similar in architecture and design to the Trinity Building. This building will be called the "U. S. Realty" Building. Both of these buildings will extend solidly from Broadway on the east to Trinity pl on the west. Temple st will be eliminated, from Thames st to Cedar st.

The foundations for the U. S. Realty Building will be of concrete carried down to bed rock by pneumatic caissons. For these foundations there will be seventy caissons. Forty of these will extend in practically an unbroken line around four sides of this plot, and will support the exterior columns of the building. These interior columns will be carried on a double row of caissons extending through the centre of the plot from end to end. There will be thirty of them. All these caissons will be carried down to an average depth of from 80 to 85 ft below the street curb.

From an engineering standpoint this work will provide one or two interesting features in the way of shoring the adjoining property, as well as the sinking of the caissons themselves. During operations it will be necessary to shore and protect Broadway along the east side of the excavation. This must be very carefully done to insure the safety of the heavy traffic along Broadway and also to protect and hold safe the extension of the subway to the Battery, which at this point runs very close to the building line. On the opposite, or west end of the plot, it will be necessary to support the elevated railroad structure just across from the excavation. There are three out consists of two travelers of four derricks each, operating from either end of the lot; two concrete mixers, one at each end of the lot; two air compressors and numerous hoist engines and air locks, all of which make one of the most complete equipments ever put into operation on a contract for caisson foundations for office buildings.

A Large Field for Builders at Mount Vernon.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., July 10.—The real estate market in Mount Vernon is in a vigorous and healthy condition, and all the brokers are kept busy answering the inquiries of the many parties who are desirous of buying dwelling houses for occupancy, flat and store property for investment, and acreage for subdivision. There is a great demand for two-family houses, and also for single dwellings under $7,500 in price. Houses in the Chester Hill section, on lots 50 ft in width by 100 ft and over in depth, sell readily before they are finished for from $11,000 to $18,000, according to size and finish, and on lots 100 ft in width from $15,000 to $25,000, and some even higher. Building lots within easy walking distance of the New Haven Railroad station are very scarce and sell from $2,500 upward, for 50 ft front, according to the distance from the station.

There is a great shortage of houses to rent on account of the active selling market. Any number of houses to rent from $30 to $75 per month would find ready takers. Apartments renting from $25 to $50 per month are also in great demand. Several New York builders have made a beginning, catering to the demand for apartments, but there is a large field here for their operation. Many plots of acreage have been sold and are being subdivided. The two large factories of the Mauser Manufacturing Co. and Max Ams, and the foundry of the Henry Bonnard Bronze Co., employing over 1,500 hands, are all now in full operation and hundreds of their employes cannot find living accommodations in Mount Vernon. We need at once brick flats having apartments of four and five rooms, to rent from $16 to $20 each apartment, for their occupancy; also small houses on 25 ft lots to rent from $25 to $35 per month, for clerks and the better class of mechanics.

The finances of Mount Vernon are in A1 condition, and the tax rate is lower than in other communities surrounding us. Capitalists who will come in and build up blocks of houses or loan money on building enterprises will be well paid. Within a few weeks the electric service will be installed on both the New Haven and Harlem railroads, which will shorten the present time of 40 minutes between Mount Vernon and the Manhattan City Hall very materially. Mount Vernon has many advantages over the upper section of the Bronx in the matter of improved streets, the purest water supply and the lowest death rate in the state, high grade schools, churches, clubs, and large department stores.

No one can predict where Mount Vernon will be ten years hence, when the two new electric railroads now building are in operation—the Rapid Transit entering the city from the south by the White Plains road, and the many other factors which will serve to bring together here a community of several times the present population of 28,000. It has more than quadrupled since I decided to make it my home, twenty-two years ago.

Progress and Logical Design of Reinforced Concrete.

BY ROSS F. TUCKER, M. AM. SOC. C. E.*

Those who are under the impression that the present popularity of reinforced concrete is largely a fad may be interested to note the progress of this type of construction since its inception in 1885, in terms of the production of Portland cement in the United States. In 1882 the output of Portland cement was 82,000 barrels. At this time reinforced concrete was unknown, and the value of Portland cement concrete as a structural material was not dreamed of. Natural and Rosedale cements had the field practically to themselves, and concrete, where it was used at all, was confined wholly to foundation and underground work.

In 1885 Ernest L. Ransome, then of San Francisco, invented the twisted bar and demonstrated the principle underlying all making and handling concrete were of a primitive kind, we can appreciate the difficulties with which he had to contend, and can bestow the greater credit and honor upon him for the courage and splendid mechanical and engineering ability which he displayed in undertaking the construction of steel concrete buildings of such magnitude in a country subject to earthquakes. Among the structures above referred to are the Museum Building (interior shown in Fig. 1), and Girls' Dormitory (Fig. 2) at Stanford University; the interior of Academy of Sciences (Fig. 3), the building for the Pacific Borax Company and the Tubbs Cordage Works, and the value of his discoveries has been further accentuated by the fact that during the recent great earthquake in California all of the above structures, comparatively crude as they were in design, came through the ordeal practically unscathed, where buildings of brick and stone in their immediate vicinity have been entirely wrecked.

In 1890 Ransome determined to introduce his ideas throughout the country, and for a considerable time thereafter the writer was engaged in lecturing before technical societies and architects and engineers generally on the subject of reinforced concrete and the possibilities of that type of structure. While these ideas were all of great interest to the technical public, they were so new to the building world at large that it was only here and there that they gained a foothold. The steel frame structure by this time had been brought to a high degree of development, and architects and engineers, while interested in the possibilities of reinforced concrete, were loth to give up the steel skeleton and adopt a type of construction with which they were so entirely unfamiliar. The lesson, nevertheless, had its effect. About this time came the introduction of expanded metal and the mesh systems of concrete construction, which enabled the architects to retain their steel structures and use concrete for the filling and arch work between beams, in place of brick work and terra cotta. These methods enabled the architects to use concrete in a conservative manner and to become acquainted with its structural properties without abandoning the steel frame, which constituted the main structural basis of their design. In this period, from 1890 to 1895, the production of Portland cement progressed from 300,000 barrels to 900,000 reinforced structures whereby it is possible to incorporate steel bars in a mass of concrete in such a manner as to enable the concrete to withstand transverse loads. The production of Portland cement in the United States was then 150,000 barrels. From 1885 to 1890, Ransome was engaged in applying his discoveries to works of the most elaborate and extensive character. When we take into consideration that, at that time, the subject of reinforced concrete was in a most elementary experimental stage, and that there were no accurate formulae or known valuations for determining concrete design, and that the appliances for barrels, and the lessons learned from the use of concrete in this respect led to its adoption in a large number of projects originally planned for other materials.

From this time on the use of concrete grew very fast. In 1897 and 1898 there came a great shortage in structural steel. Deliveries were so uncertain and remote that engineers the country over were at their wits end to find ways and means for fulfilling their designs, and they turned at once to reinforced concrete to help them out of their dilemma. European systems of reinforced concrete were introduced and engineers generally began to study the subject from a scientific standpoint, with the result that by 1900 the steel concrete structure was recognized generally as a structural possibility and its adoption was considered for every conceivable kind of problem. At this period the production of Portland cement in this country had reached 8,400,000 barrels per annum. In the succeeding five years, however, the popularity of concrete and the confidence of the building public in its properties were demonstrated in a most astonishing manner, for the production of Portland cement sprang from 8,400,000 barrels in 1900 to 36,000,000 barrels in 1905.

Any one considering the progress of the industry, as noted above, can hardly say that the reinforced structure is a fad, although it is to be admitted that concrete has been applied to many purposes for which it is not at all suitable. It is a fact now beyond dispute that the steel concrete structure has passed the experimental stage and has been adopted throughout the land as a building element of the greatest value. It is true, however, that much has yet to be done in the education of the architect and the engineer in the use of concrete in a logical manner and for its real value. Owing to the comparative youth of this type of building, architects and engineers generally have not as yet given any great attention to the development of design essentially suitable to reinforced concrete. It is the general practice to design in brick, stone and steel and then to call upon a reinforced concrete engineer to reproduce a structure in reinforced concrete. This is an imperfect and unscientific method and unfair to the development of the true value of the concrete structure. The average architect and engineer is yet too unfamiliar with the characteristics of concrete to design a structure solely from that point of view. He thinks in terms of brick and steel, designs in brick and steel, and then attempts to adapt concrete to his structure. The architect who would design intelligently for reinforced concrete must think in terms of reinforced concrete, but up to the present time the condition is similar to requiring a carpenter to think in the metric system when he has been all his life accustomed to figure in feet and inches. He must stop and translate and is unable to bring his mind to an adequate appreciation of his dimensions until he has so translated them.

Reinforced concrete is a structural method possessing peculiar characteristics which are essentially its own, and any design which is to be carried out in this material should be adapted to their characteristics and qualifications. For instance, many have an idea that the cost of cement and the labor involved in the handling of concrete are the particular elements of cost in a concrete structure, whereas, as a matter of fact, the determining factor in the cost of concrete of whatever nature is the cost of the wood work and centering required for the carrying out of the design. The initial cost of a yard of concrete may be $5, but that same yard of concrete may be made to cost $40 by the addition thereto of elaborate forms necessary for the placing of the concrete in the position required in the design. On every structure projected for brick and steel, and afterwards converted into concrete, the cost of concrete will vary for every yard from $5 to $40, depending upon the position in which it is placed and the elaboration of the forms necessary for the fulfilling of the design. It is, therefore, apparent that the greatest economy in the use of reinforced concrete is to be attained by keeping this fact in mind and designing the structure accordingly. The essence of economy in concrete work is the simplicity and duplication of forms, and this of itself demands the elimination of projecting members such as cornices, belt courses and offsets to the largest possible extent. The reinforced concrete building must be essentially a plain building, and its architectural effect must be developed by the study of the relation of the openings to the masses, together with the assistance of such color scheme as may be applied by the insertion in the face of the structure of tile or mosaic work in color masses suitable to the problem.

The above ideas are fairly well demonstrated in the accompanying cut (Fig. 4). It will be noted that the structure is of the skeleton type, with the rectangle between the horizontal and vertical members filled in with block work or brick work, independent of the structure itself. Belt courses, cornices and offsets are eliminated in a very large degree and shadow effects are obtained from projections of a simple character. Window openings are small and are protected by fire shutters, thereby rendering the building practically proof against the ingress of fire from neighboring buildings. Experience has demonstrated that fire is not to be feared so much from within as from without, and the essential to good design of a fireproof character is that the building may be enclosed from top to bottom. * *

Many of the monuments of Rome that have endured for more than 2,000 years were built of a concrete far inferior to that which we use to-day, so inferior, in fact, and so different in method and material as to be hardly entitled to the name of concrete, as we know it, at all. Still these monuments, stripped of their facings of mosaic, tile and stone by the ravages of time and conquest, still endure. What, then, may we expect of the great structures which we are building under the eyes of modern science? It is certain that the concrete of our day will endure far beyond the life of any natural stone, and it is not too much to hope and predict that when our architects have become acquainted with the true characteristics of this wonderful material, they will create a new architecture more original and more truly American than any that we have attained thus far. The future is replete with possibilities. We have learned thoroughly how to make concrete strong, let us learn now how to make concrete beautiful.

BUILDING NOTES

On Monday last the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings began closing at 3 p. m., instead of 4, to continue during July and August.

In a note from Mr. N. D. Saunders, cashier of the Citizens' State Bank, at Arkansas City, Kan., the Record and Guide is informed that Mr. Carnegie has given $16,000 for a public library building in that city, and that competitive designs are invited from architects.

One of the features of the construction of the Pennsylvania tunnels is the elimination of steam power at the Madison av shaft, where the compressors furnishing compressed air for the rock drills, pumps and other apparatus are operated by General Electric Co.'s motors, and the spoil is hauled in the tunnels by General Electric locomotives and hoisted by elevators operated by electricity. The contract for the Manhattan Island section was awarded to the United Engineering & Contracting Co. and work on it is progressing rapidly in six headings for the two-track and three-track concrete lined structures driven westward from the shafts at 1st av, and in both directions from shafts at Madison av. This work is all in solid rock.

ACCEPTED DESIGN FOR THE NEW QUEENS COUNTY COURT HOUSE, AT LONG ISLAND CITY.

Subway Routes Approved in Part.

In the matter of the application of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners, to the New York Supreme Court, Appellate Division, First Department, for the confirmation of the report of the Commissioners upon the proposed 3d av route and ten others, a decision was rendered this week approving of the report, with certain limitations. Eight other routes have not yet been reported on. As the court points out, some of the routes parallel one another and some are actually conflicting, and the Rapid Transit Commissioners are by the court's order required to choose within the next two years which are to be built, and such of the routes as the commission fails to determine on within that period will be considered disapproved.

Presiding Justice O'Brien, in the opinion handed down by the court, shows that by the record submitted the nineteen routes will cost $300,000,000 for construction and $150,000,000 more for equipment, a total of $450,000,000. Against this, the city's present borrowing margin is about $61,000,000. This margin may be increased by an increase in valuations of property, and this may result in the city having about $110,000,000 leeway from July 1, 1906, to July 1, 1907. But if all this is to go in subways, there will be nothing left for the growing necessities of the city in many other directions.

To anticipate a great increase in valuations as a justification for an enormous outlay of money within the next few years would, Justice O'Brien says, be a policy possibly more fatal to the development of the city than a failure to provide transit facilities. He adds:

"Upon the record before us, it appears beyond the possibility of doubt that the city has not the financial ability at the present time to undertake the building of all the routes proposed, and the only effect of our approval will be practically to completely appropriate and tie up every thoroughfare leading into and through Manhattan borough.

"Future engineering or mechanical improvements may render such a universal scheme of subways unnecessary, and to preserve the city's rights and interests it seems better to approve all the routes, with the limitation that only such as the Rapid Transit Commissioners may decide on within the next two years are to be considered finally approved."

THE TAXPAYER'S CASE.

Opposition to the confirmation of the report was made by Robert E. Dowling, through his counsel, Hon. Martin W. Littleton. The proposition which Mr. Dowling suggested was that the court knowing that $41,000 was the total of the borrowing margin—the city's net borrowing margin—and knowing that the cost of these proceedings here will be in the neighborhood of $450,000,000, an inconceivable sum of money, will say to the Rapid Transit Commission: "As far as the city has any borrowing margin you may exercise your powers, you may discharge your functions, you may proceed with the development of the subway, but we would not empower you, the greatest debt incurring body in the world, who knows nothing of schools, who knows nothing of docks, who knows nothing of the varied improvement that New York demands, to proceed, even under the provisions of the Rapid Transit Act, to pledge the credit of the City of New York."

Through his counsel Mr. Dowling further maintained that "the Rapid Transit Act says that as soon as you approve these reports it shall be their duty to proceed. The language of the act is that, as soon as the consents shall have been had, as provided in Section VI., the Rapid Transit Commission shall enter into contracts for construction of these routes. The duty is upon them, and it seems to be forthwith and immediate.

"Counsel may say, 'we will hold these franchises in abeyance; we will plaster the streets with franchises and hold them.' If the court approves that, if the commission has power to say when these franchises may be exercised, it may be said to be ten or twenty or twenty-five years before the court will again be called upon; because under the Act, if any of these routes be approved, they have the power to change them from time to time, and they may change them in the most radical fashion, although not to fail to conform to the general plan.

"So I say that it occurs to me on this report, and on all of these reports, that the court is bound to confine the operations of the Rapid Transit Commission and the City Government to the development of those franchises which are within the financial power of the city to build upon and control, and in doing so it is bound either to send these reports back to the commissioners, who sent them here, or hold them here, but not to pass on, because once this branch of the government, to wit, the judicial, passes that power, it is remitted to the Rapid Transit Commission.

"I also suggest to the court that counsel may say, and no doubt will say, that these are alternative routes, that they may select one or the other. The law says that the Rapid Transit Commission shall select a route and ask for the consent of the local authorities, and ask for the confirmation of the Appellate Division, and when it gets that, shall build on the route, if it has the money. That is what the law says. If they are said to be alternative routes, and you confirm two, which is to be built? 'The man who bids,' says the commission, 'the bidder can select the route that is most needed.' If the bidder chooses the route, the Rapid Transit Commission have failed to choose it as the law directs."

It is elsewhere noted that Walter S. Auld has bought for the City of New York from Alexander D. Duff a site for a public library on Woodycrest av, at the intersection of Shakespeare av and 168th st, a very sightly location. A public library is a fine acquisition for any section, and it will particularly benefit "Woodycrest." The price was in the neighborhood of $16,000. The Bronx is to have another library on the east side of Franklin av, 1280-1292, the cost of the site not to exceed $48,000. The Bronx already has three finished Carnegie libraries.

Income from the Mortgage Tax.

The total income from the annual mortgage tax for the quarter ending June 30 was $113,325.38. From this amount $300 was deduced for disbursements and the remainder was deposited, one-half, or $56,512.69, in the general fund of the city of New York, the other half with the treasurer of the State of New York. The annual mortgage tax came to an end on June 30.

The total income from New York City for the year during which the mortgage tax was in operation was $693,269.81. During the last two quarters the revenue derived from the tax decreased steadily, the receipts for the last quarter being less than for any previous period of equal length.

REAL ESTATE NOTES

The Mercantile National Bank has moved to new quarters in the Western Union Building, 195 Broadway, corner Dey st.

In a statement issued yesterday, the Consolidated Exchange says the price of the new site at the southeast corner of Broad and Beaver sts was $870,000, or $72.50 per sq. foot.

L. Sherwood Palmer and John P. Finneran, formerly with S. B. Goodale & Son, have formed a partnership and opened offices at 263 West 34th st. They will do a general real estate business.

One of the largest department stores south of 23d st is negotiating for the McAlpin estate blocks east side of Broadway, from 33d to 34th sts. The McAlpins hold the property at $6,500,000, although assessed by the city at $2,500,000.

Joseph P. Day will offer 181 lots on the premises at Belle Harbor, L. I., at public auction to-day. Recently he disposed of 166 lots there within an hour. George W. Bard will also sell 229 lots on the Fort Schuyler road, Westchester village, to-day, on the Harrington estate.

M. Cohan, 885 1st av, is making contracts with real estate managers and owners to take care of all their plumbing, steam and gas fitting, roofs and leaders, repairing and other alteration work, on a yearly contract basis. Mr. Cohan has been in business more than seventeen years in one place and has worked up a large lot of customers among managers of estates, etc.

From the Tax Department lists of exempt property issued this week, it is noted that the total is $1,117,754,537, of which $817,602,300 is in Manhattan, $74,384,265 in the Bronx, $198,367,835 in Brooklyn, $17,492,421 in Queens, and $9,907,716 in Richmond. The subway is valued at $40,000,000 the new Custom House at $3,900,000, and the old Custom House at $4,500,000.

Controller Metz has set Wednesday, October 3, as the date for the Bronx tax sale for unpaid taxes for the years between 1886 and 1901, inclusive, and for unpaid water rents from 1885 to 1900, inclusive. The sale will be held in the Coroner's Courtroom, at Tremont and 3d avs, at 10 A. M. Most of the indebtedness is comparatively small. Much of it is due from estates, and in perhaps 50 per cent. of the lots the column ruled in the catalogues for the owner's name contains the word "unknown."

Satisfactory prices were obtained at the sale of the Waring estate, in the Throgg's Neck section, by Mr. Wells, at the Vesey st exchange salesroom. The northeast corner of Eastern Boule-

HURD'S PRINCIPLES OF CITY LAND VALUES

Price, $1.50.

A book just published that shows how city values are made and the basis upon which real estate appraisements should be made.

vard and Quincy st, 25x100, went to A. M. Field for $1,150. An adjoining lot brought $850. The plot next east, about two lots, $1,075. Two other corners brought $675 and $725 respectively. Inside lots brought from $450 to $500. The property is in the line of rapid transit improvement and is easily reached at present by trolley cars.

The contemplated removal of the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange to the southeast corner of Broad and Beaver sts will put new leaven into that old quarter, and it also signifies the inclination of the financial district to expand southward. Real estate brokers are decidedly of the opinion that the move of the Consolidated Exchange will draw a train of improvements after it, and will have an elevating effect on values both in south Broad st and in Beaver st. A more important move for the financial district has not been made in many years. One of the first effects will be a great demand for offices in the vicinity. In the negotiations Herman Le Roy Edgar, of 81 Nassau st, represented the Consolidated, and Mr. Marling, of Horace S. Ely & Co. the previous owners. It is not thought that the building to be erected will be of the skyscraper type, but rather somewhat after the style of the New York Stock Exchange. About six months ago the site selected by the Consolidated, together with adjoining property, was sold jointly to the City Investing Co., the United States Realty and Improvement Co. and the Century Realty Co. for $1,100,000, and these companies will finance the building operation, the contract for which will go to the George A. Fuller Co., as stated here last week.

Trouble Over Topographical Plans in Queens.

The plans of laying out new streets in Queens adopted by many developers of suburban sections without regard to any future layout to be adopted as part of the city map, threaten to create confusion and expense and waste when the legal street openings are carried out in accordance with the official plan. In many instances there is no connection between the privately laid out highways at the boundary of adjoining farms and no harmony as to direction or even as to width.

Engineer Robert Crowell, when asked how far the city may be able, in its layout, to take advantage of the various farm streets, said:

"We could not follow these over crisscross lands and highways. We always try to lay out our street system with an idea of causing as little damage as possible to property affected, but the main idea is to subserve the interests of the whole borough and the city. The present farm layout in many instances is an impossible one for the city. Through travel would be stopped. There could be no general sewer system and no thoroughfares between parts of the borough a mile or more apart.

"The city does intend to lay out streets irrespective of private layouts. What can be done to consolidate the old layout with the new in settled localities where no material departure from the general plan will be necessitated we will do, but in many cases the city system of highways must cut across existing lines and create gore lots and chords and will call for the removal of buildings. How much better that the men laying out the new tracts protect thousands of men who are to put their all in their new homes in these localities."

The sections most affected are the easterly half of the town of Jamaica, outside of the villages, and of the town of Flushing, where there has as yet been no topographical survey and where hundreds of big farms have lately changed hands and thousands of lots have been put upon the market. Some of the owners have consulted with the topographical department in advance of their layout, but more have not.

The Record and Guide has opened an Uptown Office in the Metropolitan "Annex," Nos. 11-13 East 24th Street, in order to accommodate its customers, so many of whom are located in the central and northern parts of the city, and at the same time to provide additional quarters for its own increased staff and for the Architectural Record and "Sweet's" Index.

FINANCIAL doctors are in complete disagreement as to the immediate course of the Stock market. This is evidenced by the opinions lately expressed in the editorial and financial columns of the leading dailies. A striking case in point appeared when an elaborate editorial in one paper setting forth the bull conditions, and in fact pooh-poohing the claim that Wall Street any longer reflects conditions or discounts the future, was followed the next day in the same publication by a bull financial review, the keynote of which was that Wall Street might always be relied upon to express the consensus of the best thought and to discount events not already discernible to other than speculators' eyes. Thus we have the situation. The operators are divided into two camps, each with its arguments and each confident of its position. The bulls rely on the undoubted record breaking statistics of trade furnished each week—the bears answer that stocks are for sale in unlimited supply on every rally and that the volume and class of selling indicate the source as from those who are in "the know." They add that later the selling will become general and a break be precipitated. The bears, moreover, insist that a campaign with a radical candidate for governor in this State and a new Congress to be elected with tariff revision as the principal issue, is bound to make for financial and business disquietude. This they contend is not taking into account the effect of the competition between State and National government in corporation baiting, and it must be said that there is much food for thought in the bear arguments. If commission houses were loaded with stocks carried on a margin even at the present low prices, the situation might be vulnerable, but careful inquiry seems to settle on twenty-five per cent. of their usual lines, that being the proportion of the amount of money now being borrowed by the average commission house, thus showing the lightest bull account open for years. The inference is that if the market is to decline to the extent predicted by the bears, it will be the result of the selling by actual holders as distinguished from margin holders. The money market is now ceasing to be a bugaboo, and indeed some foreign exchange experts claim that there will be a large foreign balance to our credit before the fall season begins, when the large exports of cotton and grain normally turn exchange in our favor. It would seem, therefore, and we still adhere to the opinion that money will be unusually easy this autumn. As to the stock market itself, it is dull, going through the process of what is known in nautical sailing parlance as "backing and filling." This is by no means an unusual state of things in July and August, and is not at all inconsistent with great activity afterwards.

IT is estimated by the "Sun" that during the past eighteen months living accommodations have been provided in New York City for something over 600,000 additional population; and it is urged by that journal that the construction of all kinds of dwellings and tenements is being very much overdone. In calling attention to these fact, the "Sun" is undoubtedly placing its finger on the worst weakness in the existing real estate situation, but it should be added that the danger is probably exaggerated. Over-building there has undoubtedly been and its results are manifest particularly on Washington Heights and on the upper East Side; but the overbuilding is not so bad as the figures given would lead one to believe. According to the State census New York adds only about 125,000 people per annum to its number of inhabitants, so that we are apparently building houses for 600,000 people, when there are apparently less than 200,000 to fill them. The Record and Guide doubts, however, whether New York is building at the present time three times as rapidly as it should, for if it were the consequences would already have been much more disastrous than they are. We believe that the census under-estimates the recent increase in the population of New York City, and there is every reason why it should do so. That population consists so largely of recent immigrants, who speak no English, and who herd together in small quarters, that the difficulties of accurate enumeration are much more serious than they are in a city of private residences. Moreover, the error would most assuredly be on the side of under rather than over-estimate. The immigration officials calculate that some 200,000 aliens have settled in New York during each of the two past years, and while the outgoing emigration must be deducted from this total, such a deduction would not be large. On the whole, what with the unusually large alien immigration, the great number of residents of other States, who are attracted to New York in periods of prosperity, the displacement of existing residents by business improvements and the natural increase in population, it is probable that during the past eighteen months New York had to provide for about 400,000 instead of 200,000 additional residents. Of course, this is only a guess; but it is a guess which is justified by a very strong series of general considerations.

STATISTICS of Greater New York continue to furnish evidences of the great progress the city is making in all its activities. Manufacturing industries thrive and flourish, and there has been a large increase in the number of establishments since 1900, according to the Census Bureau, which must have its effect in increasing the value of real estate generally and of sites for such manufactories in particular. In 1905 the city had 20,839 establishments, as against 19,243 in 1900, an increase of over 8 per cent. The capital invested in them in 1905 was upwards of a thousand millions of dollars, compared with $853,000,000 in 1900, or an increase of 22 per cent. The value of the products of these manufacturing establishments in 1905 was more than $1,526,000,000, showing an increase of 30.2 per cent. in five years. Taking the increase by boroughs, Manhattan and the Bronx showed an advance in output in the five years from $811,000,000 to $1,043,000,000, over 28 per cent.; Brooklyn increased from $313,617,000 to $373,462,000 or 19 per cent. and Queens and Richmond $48,444,000 to $109,808,000 or the impressive percentage of one hundred and twenty-six and a fraction. Comparative statistics of the principal industries show women's clothing first in Manhattan and The Bronx, the output in 1905 being valued at $164,723,000 against $99,464,000 in 1900. Men's clothing, printing and publishing, tobacco, slaughtering and meat packing, millinery and lace goods follow in the order named. The chief industry in Brooklyn is in foundries and machine shops. Other important industries in that borough are malt liquors, boots and shoes, lumber products, cordage and twine and chemicals. From present indications it would seem, therefore, that in a decade or so Greater New York, if the increase continues in a like ratio, may become the largest or one of the largest manufacturing centres of the world.

FROM the Federal census a computation has been prepared of the number of Father Knickerbocker's possessions compared with the property of other municipalities, and it is somewhat to the disadvantage of New York. So the Comptroller has had prepared in his turn a statement from the Knickerbocker point of view of city property officially footing up $560,000,000, a tidy sum for a city which, twenty years ago, in a count of its assets, could figure only $150,000,000 in the present Boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx, and less than $50,000,000 additional in Brooklyn and the other territories now included in the Greater New York. The city figures show that the old City of New York contributed eight years ago most of the assets to the present municipal partnership of $40,000,000 in piers, docks, bulkheads, and ferry-houses. Manhattan has $39,860,000. Of Police Department buildings, mostly station houses, Manhattan owns $2,000,000 of $3,500,000. Of schools and colleges to the value of $50,000,000, $33,000,000 are in Manhattan and $17,000,000 in the other four boroughs. Of $6,300,000 in armories, Manhattan has $3,750,000. In addition to these, Manhattan has $22,800,000 of Subway property, $6,000,000 of library site foundations out of $6,100,000 in the whole city, and $7,400,000 of $8,400,000 in jails and correctional institutions. Altogether, Father Knickerbocker is doing quite well, and continues to have reason to feel that he is still the chief and majority-interest partner in the thriving municipality of New York.

The State Tax Commission.

DURING the summer a State tax commission will be sitting for the purpose of considering the existing system of taxation as a whole, and of recommending whatever changes there may be needed in it in order to make it more consistent and equitable. There can be no doubt that such an examination of our tax laws is extremely necessary, and it is very much to be hoped that the resulting report will be disinterested and comprehensive. During the past ten years the changes which have been made in our State tax laws have been continual and have amounted finally almost to a complete revolution in the system. The most important question which the commission will be obliged to consider is whether the theory which underlies these changes is sound and adequate, and whether it should be supplemented by certain additional and still more drastic modifications of the existing system.

During the past ten years the great object of our State legislation has been to do away with the State taxation of real estate. At the beginning of that period about half the State revenues were derived from special taxes, such as that upon inheritances, while the other half were raised by the general property tax, the burden of which fell mostly upon real estate. Little by little, by means of increasing certain corporation taxes, all the State revenues except a small amount have been derived from special taxes, and real estate has been practically exempted from State taxation. Doubtless the chief motive which prompted the Republican leaders to make this change was the belief that it would be popular. The general property tax falls upon small property owners all over the State, while the special taxes are paid for the most part by the large propertied interests domiciled chiefly in New York City. But the change could be publicly advocated on other grounds. It has been very generally held by writers on taxation that real estate is not a proper subject of general taxation. Its value for purposes of taxation must necessarily be assessed by local boards, and these local boards will not adopt any uniform level of assessment. In some counties the rate was as low as 25 per cent., while in others it was as much as 90 per cent. The State Board of Equalization whose duty it was to remove these inequalities was confronted by a job which it was impossible to perform in a satisfactory manner; and there was a general impression, particularly in New York City, that the Board did not want really to equalize valuations. The result of its work certainly was that New York City paid more than its share of the general tax. The almost entire abolition of this general tax has certainly helped to remove certain palpable inequalities in the State system of taxation, and it certainly relieved the owner of real estate in this city of a small portion of his burden. No doubt the relief so afforded to the owner of real estate was counterbalanced by the additional burdens imposed upon certain large corporate and financial interests domiciled in New York City; but inasmuch as these interests seem capable of paying the increased charges without any severe strain the result on the whole appears to be a more equitable system of State taxation.

But have these changes gone as far as they should and what of the future? During the next ten years the State will need a largely augmented revenue. The interest charges on the canal bonds will demand an increased income of several million dollars a year, and the $50,000,000 which are to be spent upon good roads will also have to be paid for. The special taxes now on the statute books will doubtless automatically yield larger returns; but these returns will not increase any more rapidly than the ordinary needs of the State government, so that additional taxes will be necessary to pay for additional expenses. Where will the burden of these taxes be placed?

The Republican leaders have shown very plainly that they do not know where to turn for new sources of special taxation, and their authorization of the existing commission is an admission that their system of special taxation is not entirely adequate and satisfactory. It is obvious, consequently, that the report of the commission cannot be confined to a mere endorsement of the changes of the past ten years. That simple task can just as well be left to the Republican party platforms. The commission must go further and consider the changes which are necessary in order to provide sufficient revenue for the manifest future needs of the State, and in so doing it must also consider whether or not the existing means of raising both local and State revenues are scientific and fair.

In short, unless the commission proposes to shirk its duty it must consider the general property tax. As we all know the purpose of the original system of State taxation was the simple and apparently just one of making each citizen pay a certain small percentage of all the property he owned; and this system worked well enough as long as a man's property consisted mostly of tangible things, such as furniture, stock of all kinds, and improved or unimproved real estate. But when personal property became more and more a matter of securities, such as stocks, bonds, mortgages and the like, which merely represented tangible property, otherwise liable to taxation, the general property tax broke down completely. At the present time it reaches only real estate and personal property owned by people who cannot entirely dispense with their ownership by means of a lie. The general property tax so far as it is applied to the taxation of personal property is impossible to collect and offers the largest exemptions to the sturdiest liars. Moreover, it in some measure justifies lying, because it seeks to subject many forms of property to double taxation. This consequence was so obvious in case of the general property tax on mortgages that mortgages have been finally exempted from its provisions; but if the general property tax works an injustice in respect to the holders of mortgages, it works an equal injustice to the owner of railroad stocks and bonds. Such owners feel justified, consequently, in telling lies in order to escape the injustice; and the only property owner who cannot escape is the owner of the soil and its improvements. His property is tangible. He must, and, of course, he should pay. The only question is whether he should pay more or less than he does. One set of tax reformers wish to exempt personal property entirely, and collect all local and State taxes from unimproved real estate. Another wishes to raise a large portion of the local revenues from a tax on the rent a man pays, and to assess what remains on unimproved real estate. We shall not attempt to choose between them, but manifestly the permanent value of the work of the State commission will depend upon the way it deals with this question of the general property tax. It cannot be evaded, and the time is now ripe for some decisive action. The present law is an anachronism, and if the State tax commission does not dare to recommend some alternative general policy, it may at least advise that each locality should be permitted to deal with the question as its wisdom or its interests dictate. The general property tax only concerns the system of local taxation at present, and if the State cannot resolve the difficulty, it can at least withdraw and give the local authorities a chance.

Architecture of the New Custom House.

By MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER.

The new New York Custom House, on Bowling Green, now in a condition to be fairly well seen and judged, almost irresistibly provokes comparison with the old in Wall st. Primarily, perhaps, on account of the identity of the purpose to which the old has been and the new is to be devoted. For the matter of that, most New Yorkers who are likely to read these remarks are aware that the old Custom House so-called was not built for the purposes of a custom house at all, but for those of a merchants' exchange. The only building extant in Manhattan erected for a custom house, excepting this new one, is the little "Parthenon" at the corner of Wall and Nassau, which now does duty as the sub-treasury. Built in the thirties for a custom house, it was outgrown in a decade and the Federal Government kindly took their elephant off the hands of the merchants whose civic pride had so far outrun their sense of practicality as to induce them to erect it for their communal purposes. A voracious elephant it was, eating off its own head and theirs. For, with the ground, it had cost two millions, a prodigious sum for the New York of those days, twice as much as the closely succeeding Trinity Church cost, and out of all comparison with the sum that its own successor and supplanter has cost Uncle Sam sixty-five years later. The explanation that it was not meant for a custom house is needed to vindicate the memory of its architect as a "practical man." For his rotunda, lighted only from above, was an eligible apartment for a daily meeting of merchants, though abominably unsuited to the practical work to which it came to be devoted.

Now that the new successor is finished, an architectural comparison is quite in order and quite fair. The area, one supposes, is virtually equal, though the new building is of six stories against three and a low inconspicuous attic, for the architectural attic above the entablature of the Wall st building is evidently a later and utilitarian addition architecturally extraneous and negligible. The architecture consists in effect of the colonnade fronting Wall st. The other three sides of the building consist of walls almost architecturally blank, well enough very possibly for their purpose of foils to the single front and the single feature, masses of good and solid masonry of cut granite, but certainly not worth considering on their own account. The one attempt at architecture which their each side upon a studiously plain basement. It is, truly, that Wall st front, one of the most impressive examples on Manhattan Island, or, for that matter, in the United States, of the effectiveness of the classic colonnade. If it have a rival in its own kind, it is, or rather was, that Colonnade Row, in Lafayette pl, unfortunately now partly demolished, not much posterior to it in point of time, the work of the good and now forgotten Seth Geer. It is an unfailing effect, that effect of the long colossal colonnade, long enough to be interminable to the eye, colossal enough to give it a scale visibly superior to its neighbors. These two examples of it would prove that, prove it better perhaps than the nearly contemporary colonnade of the Treasury in Washington, prove it as well, perhaps, as the colonnade, not so very much anterior in point of time, of the Bourse in Paris, the masterpiece of the classic revival in France.

Only (and this is our point) there must be no compromise. If the needs of your building happen to interfere with the re-expanses show, outside of the "trim" of the windows, which is well enough, is the moulded sill course under the third story, which divides the second story from the third, and this is architecturally worse than useless, being a belt without rhyme or reason, emphasizing a division of the wall included in the height of the order into two equal parts, a division which should rather be slurred than emphasized. The order is the thing which to all intents and purposes comprises the architecture.

The order is the thing also which inevitably compels a comparison between the old building and the new, of which it is also the chief feature. The question arises, do the architects of our current variety of classic understand their business of making an effective architectural display out of the elements of Greek architecture better than did the Greek revivalists of the fourth decade of the nineteenth century, specifically than good old Isaiah Rogers, fresh from such triumphs as were constituted by the Astor House in New York and the Tremont House in Boston? Does the new Custom House gain or lose, as a mere matter of architectural effect, in comparison with the old?

To ask that question, it seems to us, is almost to answer it. There is no front or aspect of the New Custom House so impressive and imposing as the Wall st front of the old. That row of twelve monoliths of a monumental solidity and a monumental scale, the four central mounted upon pedestals which subdivide the broad and ample "perron," the flight of stairs which gives access to the main floor, and the four flankers on quirements of your architecture, you must, as a conscientious Hellenic revivalist, sacrifice your building. The "dodge," is one may say so, of prefacing a portico to act the centre of each front, as exemplified very effectively in the good Ammi Young's Boston Custom House, will not wholly and in most cases serve your turn. It served Ammi's turn because the clerks who had to work in the shadow of his porticoes and to execrate his memory every hour for shutting off their light were, luckily for him, not the officials who had to pass upon his plans.—Architectural Record.

To Be the Largest Apartment House in Manhattan.

The above design is by Messrs. Rouse & Sloan, architects for the new Hendrik Hudson apartment house, Hendrik Hudson Co., owners. The structure will be of the highest type of fireproof construction and will cover a plot 208 ft on Riverside Drive and 135 ft deep on Cathedral Parkway, 110th and 111th sts, and will cost about $1,000,000.

It is planned with a system of exterior courts so that all apartments face the Drive or the streets. There will be nine apartments on a floor, consisting of six, seven, eight and nine rooms, with two and three baths, and all the rooms exceptionally large and light. Living rooms will be grouped around the foyers, with separate entrances to foyers and kitchens, giving the largest degree of privacy and reducing the private halls to a minimum. The apartments will be decorated, and the trim of the foyers, halls and parlors will be of white enamel. Dining rooms will be of oak, with ornamental wainscot and beam ceilings. Libraries will be trimmed in Circassian walnut. Kitchens and bathrooms will have tiled wainscoting and all fixtures throughout will be of the very highest type.

The elevators are to be concentrated in front of a central court, forming an imposing architectural feature. The apartments are all focused towards this elevator hall, with the result that the house will be enabled to be operated with perfect service with many less elevators than is ordinarily the case with a building of this size. The main entrance hall will be a spacious room decorated in Caen stone and bronze relief ornaments, and will have a large frieze consisting of a series of mural paintings with the subjects pertaining to the history of Hendrix Hudson.

The facade in scheme will be that of an Italian villa, built of French Pierre de Lens limestone, brick and colored terra cotta, with wide projecting Spanish tile roof, supported by large ornamental bronze brackets. The architects, in order to get the desired texture in the mass of the building, will use in the facade Roman shaped brick taken from the run of the kiln, laid up in Flemish and Old English bonds with very wide joints.

The Riverside Drive elevation will have two towers to rise above the main roof, connected by a pergola. At all of the windows there will be wrought iron balconies, with window boxes for flowers in summer. The building, with its scheme of highly colored terra cotta, red tile and use of foliage, promises to harmonize effectively with the picturesque surroundings of the Drive.

The owners have acquired the remaining property of the block on Cathedral Parkway and the greater part of the Broadway block, and will shortly erect a 12-story addition, making this probably the largest apartment house in Manhattan. The complete power plant, including dynamos, engines, boilers, filters, etc., will be installed in the new addition. There will be direct connection with the 110th st and Broadway subway station. The building will be under the same management as the Chatsworth apartment house. Estimates are now being received on all contracts. Following are the contracts so far issued: Excavating, to Patrick Reddy; face brick, to Sayer & Fischer Co.; steam heating, to Mulhern Steam Heating Co.

Fireproof Hotel Construction.

AS EXEMPLIFIED BY THE MARLBORO'-BLENHEIM, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

By ALBERT MOYER, Assoc. Am. Soc. C. E.

THE various uses of Portland cement and the numerous combinations of Portland cement concrete with other fire resisting material as applied to construction work, is a subject which is not only attracting universal attention throughout the entire world, but it is extremely interesting to the progressive architect and engineer.

It is only within the last several years that the thinking public has turned its attention towards an improved method of constructing habitations. It is rather surprising when we look back and consider this subject that the everyday question of protection against the elements in the matter of residences has made such little progress through the ages. Our lives are daily exposed to danger while living in a non-fireproof structure. Self-preservation is said to be the first law of nature, and for thousands of years we have neglected this law. It is only during times of great calamities that the public is made to think deeply on these subjects. The Baltimore fire, the Iroquois Theatre fire at Chicago, and the San Francisco earthquake and fire are only temporary disasters. The lessons they have taught are of incalculable value.

Opinion has been divided as to the best form of fireproof construction. Some claim steel frame and terra cotta floor arches; others, steel frame and concrete floor arches; still others, reinforced concrete construction throughout. It would seem that in deciding the question the purpose for which the structure is built should entirely govern in deciding which combination of materials should be used. We are all familiar with steel frame and burnt clay hollow tile. An advance has been made in combining reinforced concrete frame and burnt clay hollow tile.

It is evident that the question of fireproofing is of the utmost importance. Taking into consideration the purpose for which the structure is to be used and weighing the question of economy with that of obtaining the desired results, we are thus brought directly to the consideration of the selection of the best materials.

Under a reasonably hot fire steel frame will buckle and collapse, causing as much damage to the structure as if the building had not been fireproof at all, but giving possibly sufficient time for the inmates to escape. Reinforced concrete construction will withstand as hot a fire as the inflammable material contained in the ordinary hotel or residence can produce. Where burnt clay tile as a filling is combined with reinforced concrete it is obviously for the purpose of economy, and furnishes all the essentials of a fireproof material.

A notable example of this form of construction is the new annex to the Marlborough Hotel, Atlantic City, known as the Blenheim. In reality this is not an annex, but a separate building even larger than the hotel proper. This building is attracting more than ordinary attention. It is in close proximity to the Marlborough, and under the same management.

It is no exaggeration to say it has proven another triumph for reinforced concrete. Heretofore reinforced concrete construction has generally been considered a slower method than steel frame construction, but in this instance the building of this hotel has shown the opposite to be the case, the work having progressed more rapidly than would have been possible in steel construction. Work began almost immediately after contracts were signed. There were no waits such as would have occurred in steel frame, due to shop drawings and manufacturing the steel to dimensions, which delays so frequently occur because of market conditions. Building was started July 1, 1905, and opened March 1, 1906. Eight months.

The architects of the building, Price & McLanahan, of Philadelphia, are enthusiastic on the subject of concrete, and their success both from the artistic and structural standpoint, has more than justified their faith. Their conviction as to the fire resisting properties of concrete is based on observations made after the Baltimore conflagration. As a result there has been successfully introduced into the structural work of this hotel, a combination of reinforced concrete and hollow tile, which promises to be more than satisfactory.

The outside walls supported on concrete columns and girders are of hollow terra cotta, plastered inside and out with Portland cement plaster, making a dry, warm wall, impervious to air and moisture and forming with the metal weather-stripped doors and windows an absolute barrier against wind and weather.

The architectural features are best described by the accompanying photograph. Concrete is built with shovel and trowel, and should not be treated as an imitation of any other material. Its proper ornamentation is either cast in moulds as built, or such as can be run or fashioned on the work with the addition of such color ornament as may be obtained by the use of terra cotta or any projecting material, used as wall copings, roofs, pier caps, and such other flat color ornamentation as may be produced by the use of tiles, marble, glass or other material applied to the surface.

This means a new architecture and is a wide departure from the classic forms and accepted styles, although it is not necessary to abandon all precedence. In this building the architects have used the solid walls pierced by the simplest of openings in an effort to reduce to a minimum the chopped-up appearance common with buildings that from necessity have many windows. An effort was made to use the shadows thrown upon this broken surface by balconies to give the usual relief obtained by ornamented cornices, with the addition of a tile roof and some beautiful color obtained with mercer tile. Thus sufficient color and variety were secured to make the building essentially plain in wall surface and at the same time give a sense of richness. A moderate amount of terra cotta was used when required for sills, copings and other wall projections. These were moulded and cast in appropriate sea forms, colored light green, and glazed, which has the additional advantage of destroying any semblance of stone and giving it a plastic character that seems appropriate to moulded ornament. It is along the line of simple and direct expression that architecture grows, and cement in its manifold possibilities spreads before us a new field for the imaginative designer.

STRUCTURAL FEATURES.

The general structural design of the building consists of a suitable arrangement of columns resting on piles supporting reinforced concrete slab footings. These piles were driven by water jet into the clean, coarse beach sand. They were sunk about 20 ft, and cut off below water level to receive concrete piers or slab footings.

The pier construction was comparatively simple: the base courses are about 2-ft 3-in slabs carried 12 ins below the pile tops and reinforced about 2 ins above this level by a layer of Kahn trussed bars. The top course was uniformly 12 ins thick and was molded with a mortise reaching the full depth and 12 ins square to receive a tenon on the foot of the column.

The footings were composed of one part Vulcanite Portland cement, 2½ parts coarse sand, 5 parts ¾-in broken stone. The footing construction includes besides the column piers, a beam support for the first story walls of granite ashlar masonry. These beams connect the wall column piers all around the building at a level about 4 ft below the surface and are simple reinforced concrete girders. The column construction proper is largely rectangular in section reinforced by the Kahn system. The hooped sections were designed for a unit stress of $50 lbs per square inch, while those without hoops were designed for unit stress of 500 lbs. Some of the columns were of octagonal section. These were used only for the main tower in the first story or lobby floor. Others were of circular section and were for the same columns in the second story or exchange floor.

At each floor these columns carry a system of wall and floor girders and at their tops they support the roof frame work. The roof girders and slabs are reinforced concrete, the slabs between floor girders are in some places reinforced concrete, but usually are a special construction composed of closely spaced parallel beams of reinforced concrete filled in between with hollow tiles.

The exterior walls are of hollow tile with pebble dash Portland cement plaster finished and decorated with terra cotta and ornamental tiles.

Floors.—The floor construction is a system of girders carried by the columns and supporting slabs of reinforced concrete, or of combination reinforced concrete and hollow tile construction. The construction of the girders calls for brief mention only. They are dimensioned and reinforced according to the loads required. The filling slabs between girders are straight reinforced concrete in certain bays of the lower floor in the front wing, but in all other places they are a combination construction of reinforced concrete and burned clay hollow tile. Eight-inch slabs are used for the longer spans and 5-in for shorter spans, the depths of the tiles being respectively 6 ins and 3 ins. It will be seen that we have in this construction a 2-in concrete slab stiffened every 16 ins by reinforced ribs filled with hollow tiles of suitable dimensions to give a flat ceiling. In designing such a slab the concrete is figured to carry the stress, the tiles being considered simply as fillers. As a matter of fact, however, the tile will have a certain amount of arch action and thus add to the strength of the floor.

The floor covering in the guest rooms is a 2-in layer of cinder concrete in which pipes and wires are imbedded and which is covered with a 1-in finishing coat of cement mortar, trowelled smooth with round fillets at the wall angles. In the rooms devoted to public purposes, wood nailing strips are imbedded in the cinder concrete, to which is attached a board flooring.

Walls.—The exterior walls are independently supported for each story by reinforced concrete wall girders as in steel skeleton-frame buildings. The first story wall is granite ashlar masonry. The walls for all stories above the first are of hollow tile laid up in Vulcanite Portland cement mortar and carried on the wall girders at the floor lines. The outside of the wall tiles is given a finish consisting of a pebble dash coat of one part Portland cement and one part sand.

Roofing.—The roof construction consists of pitch roof for the centre and rear wings, the solarium and the large dormers, arch roof for the small dormers and dome roof for the ballroom in the solarium and main and small towers. These roofs are all constructed of reinforced concrete. They are supported at the eaves by the wall girders at that level, and at the tops of the main slopes by longitudinal 12x24-in girders connecting the interior columns. The roof slab is continuous from the arch and between opposite eave lines and is divided by the interior column girders into three bays, one centre bay and two side bays. The slab in the centre bay is unstiffened, but those in the side bays are stiffened every 12 ft by 10x20 and 10x18-in rafters reaching from the interior column girders and to the wall girders at the eaves. The girders and rafters are made flush with the top of the slab and are of reinforced concrete. The concrete slab itself is 6 ins thick, of 1 part Vulcanite Portland cement, 2½ parts sand and 5 parts cinder, with reinforcing bars parallel with the rafters and 16 ins apart. The roofs were designed for a live load of 30 lbs per square foot, using the same unit stresses for concrete and for steel as were used in the floor work. The notable feature of their construction is the use of stone concrete for all stiffened ribs, rafters, etc., and of cinder concrete for the slabs.

The object of the cinder concrete slab construction was twofold, it reduced the loads on the supports and it gives a material to which the roofing tiles could be nailed directly.

The stair construction is of reinforced concrete. The stairs consist of a solid slab plain on the under side, having its upper side notched to form the steps. Landings between the flights are of the same type of construction as the floors, reinforced concrete and tile.

METHODS OF CONSTRUCTION.

The methods adopted for carrying out construction work were designed for speed. Unusual pains were taken so as to plan the work and equip it with a plant so that the operations would be facilitated to the greatest degree. The concrete was all mixed in two batch mixers and conveyed to the forms in wheelbarrows, handed to the upper stories by elevators. The forms were made on the site, a circular saw operated by electric motor having been installed for cutting the timber to dimensions.

In constructing the columns and floors, the forms for an entire story were set up complete. The girder forms were of the ordinary trough construction and are supported by the column forms, and intermediate posts. The slab forms are of special construction. In place of the usual solid floor construction there were used 2x8-in planks laid with 8-in spaces between. The tile fillers for the floor slab were placed so as to span the open space between these planks and lap 2 ins onto the planks at each edge. The tile and plank, therefore, together constitute the form for moulding the ribbed slab. The column moulds were constructed of the usual planking, held together by a rectangular yoke which slips over the form, fitting loose, and tightened by wedges.

The concrete was straightforward work. A rather wet mixture was used. Each floor contained 30,000 sq ft of surface, which was usually concreted in three days. Two weeks were required for building a whole story, including the erecting and taking down of the forms.

Bronx Building Statistics.

In the total of 687 buildings for which plans were filed in the Bronx during the months of April, May and June of this year, 297 were frame dwellings and 152 were brick flats. The loss in the number of flats as compared with the record for the corresponding period of 1905, amounts to 76, which is a very considerable rate for so brief a period as three months. The small gain in dwellings does not make up for the tenements, and the total estimated cost of the buildings for which plans were filed is $3,271,000 less than the record made by the similar quarter of the previous year. For the first six months of the present year the tenement house projects were 40 per cent. less than in the first half of 1905. In the following table is exhibited Bronx statistics for the second quarter of the year:

The Pennsylvania Station.

Most of the excavating for the new terminus of the Pennsylvania Railway has now been performed, and the herculean work is advancing rapidly. In a very few weeks the general contractor for the superstructure will be permitted to make a start. One of the first operations taken in hand was the building of a concrete retaining wall entirely round the site. This wall is carried down to rock level, and for a considerable proportion of its extent is of the same depth as the excavation. The thickness of the wall is 5 ft. at the top and 30 ft. at the base in the deepest parts. All material excavated is removed by locomotives through a covered cutting and along an elevated railway to a wharf built on the North River, whence it is conveyed by barges to the New Jersey shore and used for filling in the site of the new freight station in course of construction by the Pennsylvania Railway Company. Among the various problems encountered, that of maintaining the thoroughfares crossing the site of the station was one of the most serious. For instance, to provide for the conduct of traffic along Eighth avenue it was necessary to build a massive trestle viaduct 500 ft. long to support the whole width of the roadway and footwalks, and of sufficient strength to carry also the permanent way and conduit of the electric tramway along the same highway. The value of a site in the middle of New York covering nearly 23 acres is a sufficiently heavy item; and, taking into account excavation, building, and other work, the total cost of the new terminus will be so great that nothing but the extremely congested condition of traffic in the city could justify the expenditure involved.

Sewer pipe will hereafter be the subject of free competition, as the Trust promised the Federal Court this week, at Jamestown, N. Y., to dissolve. Charges of a secret contract to control production and prices had been brought against the association.

The jobs left vacant by the striking plumbers, members of Local Union No. 2, have been largely filled by the members of Local 480 and also by outside men. The strikers have been unsuccessful in bringing on sympathetic strikes in other trades in defiance of the arbitration agreement.

A strike in sympathy with carpenters was ordered on Tuesday last, at the new ferry house of the Erie Railroad, foot of West 23d st, because the D. Lupton Sons' Company, which is doing part of the work, is employing sheet metal workers on the open shop plan. The Snare & Triest Co. is the general contractor.

Hendricks' Commercial Register of the United States for Buyers and Sellers, for 1906, eleventh annual edition, is ready for delivery. More improvements and additions have been made to this edition than to any we have heretofore received. The 1905 edition required 44½ pages to index its contents, while the 1906 edition requires 61½ pages, making an addition of 17 pages. Each one of these pages of index contains 412 classifications, making a total of 7,004 new classifications. Each classification refers to manufacturers of some specialty that has been added. In consequence of these vast improvements and additions the book has been delayed fully ten weeks. Published by the S. E. Hendricks Co., 76 Elm st, Manhattan.

The Plaza Hotel murder merely adds another crime to the large number that the rough-and-ready iron bridgemen have had charged against them since they became a part of the building forces of the metropolis. The dramatic details of the midair and midday crime have horrified the public, but the atrocity is but little more serious than a great many that have been committed in secret places and in the shadows of the night by members of the same union. Fortunately the police did not let all the assassins in this case slide through their fingers, though certain remarks by the coroner manifests that peculiar sympathy for organized labor which oftentimes blinds the eyes of peace officers to their crimes. His criticism of the Fuller Co. for putting watchmen on guard is at least absurd, as the precaution is one that has had to be taken many times in the past to protect peaceable workmen from the brutality of the disciples of Sam Parks.

Work began on Saturday last tearing down the old Parkhurst church at Madison av, southeast corner 24th st. The lowering of the steeple is now progressing slowly, while tearing out the interior framework proceeds. Upon this property the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. will begin at once the erection of a tower building, to measure 75x150 ft., providing 11,250 sq. ft., which will complete the company's building, taking up the entire block bounded by Madison and 4th aves, 23d and 24th sts. The tower will overtop the Singer Building tower (40 stories) at Broadway and Liberty st by a number of stories, making this the tallest structure in this country. No building contracts have yet been awarded. The Singer Building will be 593 ft. in height, and it is estimated that the Metropolitan will go nearly 700 ft. Napoleon Le Brun & Son, 1 Madison av, are the architects. The new Parkhurst Church is situated immediately across the way, on the northeast corner, and will be ready to open in early fall.

A Scheme of Structural Betterments.

General Bingham is strongly of the opinion that what may be called a type of architecture should be adopted for police houses. As he has given the matter much consideration and has formulated quite definite ideas, it is probable that a decided change in police architecture will be noted in the next buildings erected.

somewhat reduced, and in other parts the price would be higher. According to the General's plan, $11,000,000 would be required to equip the police of the greater city with suitable quarters. The present station houses are of various styles and types, and different architects had widely divergent views as to the type of house best adapted to the special use of police precinct stations. The type the commissioner has adopted is a 4-story house on a lot 100x100 ft, with a central driveway and an interior central court. The probability is that about ten new houses will be built each year hereafter until the Bingham plan is carried out in full, at a cost of $2,000,000 each year. This amount has been provided by the Board of Estimate for the coming year.

Steel for Manhattan Bridge.

President P. Ryan, of the Ryan-Parker Construction Co., which has the contract to build the superstructure of the Manhattan Bridge, says his company is in a position to obtain all the steel that will be needed for the work. As there were rumors in the trade of an attempt to make a compact not to sell steel to the successful bidders, and compel them to sell out, so that certain steel companies could themselves get the 59th Street and 5th Avenue, Manhattan.

H. J. Hardenbergh, Architect.

In General Bingham's view there should be a comprehensive scheme of betterments. New station houses should be built for 57 old and new precincts. No new station house should be erected less than 100x100 ft in size. All should have interior courts. The entrance used by the police department should be prohibited to the public, who should enter in another way. The entrance should be on the street level so that the patrol wagon or ambulance may drive inside and the gates be shut, thus screening prisoners, especially women and children, from the gaze and interference of the public. All cells should be of the latest model of steel construction, with grated ceilings, good plumbing, ventilation, etc., and each house should have provision made for a matron. Stable accommodations should be arranged in the interior of the building for patrol wagon and the necessary horses.

The general style of architecture should be severe and strong, and modeled rather like an armory than a summer villa. In addition to the usual and indispensable rooms and appliances, the following should be provided for: Steam heating apparatus, shower baths rather than tub baths, vacuum cleaning apparatus, a clerk's room, matron's room, small gymnasium, electric lighting, plenty of storage room and book cases.

Gen. Bingham says precinct station houses should be erected so far as practicable at the corners of streets. The type of station house indicated will cost at present prices an average of not less than $150,000. In some parts of the city this price would be benefit of the contract in a more direct and lucrative way, the announcement is important.

Bridge Commissioner Stevenson said that the occasion for all the talk was a special clause in the specifications which placed a short time limit on the delivery of anchorage eye-bars to go into the concrete foundation for the bridge anchorage on the Brooklyn side of the bridge. This foundation, he said, is now ready to receive the eye-bar chain, which would moor the bridge on the Brooklyn side. There are about 1,700 tons of this heavy steel material, so constructed as to form a chain in the solid concrete—each link weighing nearly one ton. He said that there were too many steel companies making steel of this kind to place any serious obstruction in the way of getting it.

P. Ryan, president of the Ryan-Parker Co., said on Wednesday: "We will show the steel corporation that we can build the bridge and build it in quicker time than they would build it. We are here to stay. We will not be sold out nor frozen out. We can get all the steel we want and get it on time. They will find that there are others. The Manhattan Bridge won't be a hospital bridge like the Blackwell's Island Bridge, to keep in suspended construction to furnish jobs to engineers and others when they get out of a job elsewhere."

It is understood that an agreement has actually been made by the Ryan-Parker Co. with a large steel concern to supply the material and deliver it in the specified time.

The earnings on Capital Stock and Dividends for recent years have been as follows:
1902	$1,000,000	Capital.	Earnings.	Dividends.
1903	2,500,000		6 per cent.	5 per cent.
1904	2,500,000		7 per cent.	5 per cent.

1906 (First Half)	2,500,000		11 per cent.	7 per cent.
*Annual Rate.			*12 per cent.	*8 per cent.

The large increase in outstanding Guaranteed Mortgages in the past six months is but little reflected in the earnings for that period, but will show in the last half of the year. No earnings are made when mortgages are sold, the Company's half per cent. annual profit coming only as time elapses.

UNEARNED PREMIUMS.

In addition to the cash earnings are the Unearned Premiums, which consist of one half per cent. per annum on outstanding mortgages from the date of this statement to their maturities. These future profits—which are not carried as assets have increased as follows:

Unearned Premiums, July 1st, 1903.	$130,223
Unearned Premiums, July 1st, 1904.	201,438

During the past three years Dividends have been paid to Stockholders amounting to $550,000, in addition to which $260,404 have been carried to Surplus or Undivided Profits, making a total of $810,404, to which should be added the net increase in Unearned Premiums of $415,406, making total net earnings for the past three years of $1,225,810.

The Assets and Liabilities of the Company were verified and its accounts were examined as of June 30th, 1906, by THE AUDIT COMPANY OF NEW YORK, the latter certifying to the correctness of the statement of Assets and Liabilities and to the Earnings, Expenses and Dividends for the first half of the year 1906 as reported herein.

The Company reiterates its adherence to the following safeguarding limitations, which are enforced only by the Lawyers Mortgage Company.

First: The total outstanding Guaranteed Mortgages are limited to twenty times the capital and surplus of the Company. (This is the accepted European standard, whose safety has been demonstrated by 135 years of successful mortgage experience.)

Second: The profits of the Company on Guaranteed Mortgages are limited to one-half per cent. per annum. (A similar limitation is required by law of European Mortgage Companies and removes the temptation to accept doubtful loans for the sake of larger profits.)

Third: The loans of the Company are limited to the Boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx. (No loans made in adjoining suburban territory.)

Fourth: The loans of the Company are limited to selected and well built up districts in these Boroughs. (No loans made in undeveloped districts, or near nuisances.)

Fifth: The loans of the Company are limited to income-producing business or residence property. (No loans made on vacant land, churches, factories, theatres, or any special utilization.)*

The effectiveness of these limitations in safeguarding the Company's investments is clearly evidenced by the remarkably clean record as to delinquent interest and foreclosures which the Company maintains, the Company owning no foreclosure real estate, having but one mortgage under foreclosure (amount $4,500) and having interest more than one month delinquent of only $1,193.75.

The disastrous conflagration in San Francisco has naturally weakened many fire insurance companies doing business in New York and Brooklyn, and has led the Company to adopt the rule that henceforth fire insurance policies will only be accepted in companies having a capital and surplus of over $1,000,000.

The sound principles on which the Lawyers Mortgage Company conducts its business and the publicity with which it reveals every detail of the same, have won the confidence of the most cautious investors in New York and form the basis of the steady increase in its annual sales of Guaranteed Mortgages.

The passage of the Mortgage Recording Tax Law, which substitutes a tax of one-half per cent. on the recording of a mortgage for the annual charge of one-half per cent. as provided in the Mortgage Tax Law of 1905, is a measure which will undoubtedly greatly help the business of this Company. While any tax on a mortgage is double taxation and vicious in principle, the present law is a practical compromise which should greatly benefit both borrowers and lenders. Its chief effect will doubtless be to attract to mortgage investments those estates and trustees which have hitherto invested in other securities in order to avoid a heavy personal tax. The Lawyers Mortgage Company will now be able to offer tax-exempt New York City Mortgages of the highest grade guaranteed to net 4% or 4½%.

It may fairly be said that New York City Mortgages, selected by an experienced company, secured by business or residence property, having an ample margin on present values and with the added strength of New York's annual increase of over 100,000 in population and further guaranteed by a Company of $4,000,000 of assets, form the strongest mortgage security offered to investors.

RICHARD M. HURD,
President.

PRIVATE SALES MARKET

While the week in real estate was as uneventful as any this summer, it brought some indications of a return of normal conditions. On Monday real estate trading touched the low-water mark for the season. Tuesday's transactions were quite colorless, but on Wednesday the lease of the Kenesaw for a long term, Judge Blanchard's purchase of a dwelling in 92d st, and the sale of a 100-ft frontage in West 24th st were changes from the monotony of tenement house trading. To Brooklyn came signs of a return of reasonableness in prices, the absence of which has practically blocked transactions in choice sections. A realization of the fact that owners were asking far more than even a good value for their properties has at last penetrated the public mind. During the week there was a decided return of activity in Brooklyn, and it is said among brokers that a very busy fall can be assured if owners and builders will stop standing in their own light. In all parts of the greater city things seem to be shaping for a very satisfactory fall, in building as well as trading. The great drop in brick values amounting to almost 50 per cent. is a strong invitation to quicken tenement house construction, and with mortgage money gradually getting into good shape again, there is yet time for the fulfillment of the prediction that 1906 will surpass its predecessor as a building year.

The lessee is the Clendening Co., of which Ewen Hathaway, for the last fourteen years proprietor of the Hotel New Point, Amityville, L. I., is president. The Kenesaw, which has been a family hotel, was purchased by Mr. Lawson in 1900, through N. Brigham Hall & Son.

Rents Rising Sharply in Borough Park.

The rent problem in Borough Park, as shown by the statements of local real estate brokers, presents some interesting features. The number of houses to rent is very small, compared with the demand, and in consequence rentals have gone up steadily.

One dealer declared that east of New Utrecht avenue, between Sixtieth and Forty-fifth streets, he did not know of one single house to rent for less than $40 a month, and some were bringing in $50 and more. Many of these houses—in fact most of them—were to be had four years ago at $25 and $30 a month. This assertion was borne out by other dealers. At present two-family houses are netting as much as $30 a floor, and this in spite of the large number of new houses being erected.

An example of the rise in values is seen in the old Du Bois property, fronting on New Utrecht av, from 58th to 59th sts. The price paid for the land this spring by S. Frank—who purchased it from other parties—was $30,000, and an offer of $45,000 has already been made him for the plot. It will probably be held as an investment.

—We have on previous occasions drawn the attention of our readers to the effect that general words contained in their leases, and which are too often accepted as mere common form, may have on the liabilities which will be incurred by the holders of such leases. In a late case a lease, which was for twenty-one years, contained covenants by the lessees to pay "all rates, taxes and outgoings now payable or hereafter to become payable in respect of the said premises." The word "outgoings" was held to include the expenses of paving, grading and making good a road reparable by the inhabitants at large. In previous decisions the word "impositions" has been held to carry a liability to abate a nuisance, and the word "outgoings" the expenses of drainage at the requisition of a city council, and we could give many other examples. Nowadays the owners of house property are affected by the provisions of innumerable statutes which impose various liabilities upon them or upon their property. As the landlord prepares his leases, his legal advisers have endeavored to introduce words in these documents which shall hand on these liabilities to the tenants, and therefore would-be tenants should take legal advice as to the effect of the leases they are about to sign.

Sale of Lots on Crow Hill.

Wm. H. Smith sold at auction, on Tuesday, 259 lots, the old site of the Kings County Penitentiary. The total figure was $525,125, more than double the appraised value. An interesting feature of the sale is that 10 inside lots on Nostrand av brought $6,500 each, while corner lots at Nostrand and Rogers avs and Crown and Carroll sts brought only $4,675, and lots on Sullivan sold as low as $1,000 each. George Beatty, a builder, was the buyer of 20 lots, the most sold to one individual. The penitentiary will be abandoned in April, 1907, until then occupying the ground rent free. Owners of near by property are pleased at the disposition of the site, which has long been an eyesore.

By this sale a new building field opened up, which greatly relieves the tension for available sites. Crow Hill was an ugly wart on the face of Brooklyn real estate, and there is great satisfaction that it is to be removed. No attempt has ever been made until now to improve the barren lands. One of the biggest crowds that ever gathered in Montague st attended the sale.

The lots sold for an average of $1,750. The sale was made under the direction of the Real Estate Bureau of the Controller's office by an order from the court, and one of the stipulations was that the new owners permit free use of the property to the city until 1907, by which time it is believed the authorities will have removed the old prison. Builders will probably soon commence the erection of new buildings. Choices of five to ten lots were allowed to a purchaser and a five-year mortgage of two-thirds of the purchase at 5 per cent. permitted.

Later.—Bishop McDonnell, of Brooklyn, makes announcement that agents acting for him had purchased a large part of the penitentiary site at the auction, and that it is his intention to have a cathedral erected there, to cost several million dollars, and rival St. Patrick's in Manhattan. Manager Barrett, Bishop McDonnell's secretary, makes the further announcement that the Jesuits will eventually obtain possession of the old site originally selected for a cathedral by Bishop John Loughlin, at Vanderbilt and Clermont avenues, between Greene and Lafayette avenues, and will there erect a Jesuit home.

The property to which Bishop McDonnell will shortly take title for the diocese of Brooklyn is located between Nostrand and Rogers avenues, Crown and Carroll streets. This, however, does not include the entire site of the Kings County Penitentiary, and rumor has it that the remainder of the property has been purchased by a syndicate of Hebrews for the purpose of erecting thereon a Jewish synagogue.

Park Sites Recommended for Brooklyn.

A presentation very important to real estate interests in Brooklyn was made to Borough President Coler by the Committee on Public Improvements of which Nelson B. Kellmer is chairman, in a report recommending sites which should be purchased by the city for public playgrounds, small parks and refuge squares. Parts of the report follow:

We recommend the improving of Maxwell Park in the Fourth Ward, and enlarging the same as proposed by the Commission for a plaza in connection with the approach to the Manhattan Bridge and the extension of Flatbush avenue.

For the Sixth Ward section, we recommend the taking of the property on the west side of Columbia street lying between Warren and Baltic streets. This location meets with the approval of the citizens of that locality as voiced through the civic body representing that section.

To accommodate the residents of the Seventh Ward and vicinity, we recommend the taking of property between Atlantic avenue, Brevoort place, Franklin and Bedford avenues.

We recommend the cutting through of Third avenue to Rockwell place and removing the buildings from the point of land left on the block between Flatbush avenue and Rockwell place, as well as taking the building upon the triangle between Schermerhorn street, Third and Flatbush avenues. Also take the small block between Lafayette avenue and Fulton street, St. Felix street and Ashland place, which is immediately in front of the site for the New Academy of Music. This section is one that is not only close to the large stores where many are employed, but it is adjacent to the Baptist Temple, the Academy of Music and several theatres where large numbers congregate, and these open spaces are very desirable and especially in case of any emergency.

For the residents between Prospect and Carroll Parks, bordering upon Third, Fourth and Fifth avenues, we recommend the taking of the old ball grounds known as Washington Park, between Fourth and Fifth avenues and Third and Fourth streets.

For the Twenty-fifth Ward section, we recommend the taking of property adjoining Saratoga Park lying between Maccon and Halsey streets and Saratoga avenue, up to within 500 feet of Broadway for the use as a playground for the children of that locality.

Take the triangle at the junction of Broadway and Fulton street as far back as the Rapid Transit loop. This location is the eastern gateway to the old City of Brooklyn and the eyesore now there should be removed, and this improvement would be of material advantage to this section.

The fast growing section of Brownsville will require in the near future considerable space for their imperative needs. The time to secure this space is now. They have already made application to the Board of Estimate for the vacant lots lying between Blake avenue, Dumont, Douglass and Barrett streets, for the purpose of a playground and breathing space, and we heartily approve of this application.

The Flatbush section is rapidly building up, and in a comparatively short time there will be no vacant lots left for park purposes. The citizens there have already indicated the vacant lots between Flatbush, Ocean, Newkirk and Foster avenues as the proper place to locate a small park, and we so recommend.

The residents of the newer section farther down the island and near the Brighton Beach Railroad, think it would be of advantage to the city to secure a small park in their locality now and recommend the plot between East Seventeenth street and East Eighteenth street and Avenues L and K.

The Flatlands section should be taken advantage of while property is cheap and the civic bodies in that locality recommend the taking of the vacant lots between East Twenty-eighth and East Thirty-first streets and Avenue M and Flatbush avenue, which we approve.

A playground for the school children of the Eighth Ward is very desirable, and we recommend the half block on the west side of Fourth avenue, between Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth streets.

For that section of the Eastern District situated in the Fourteenth Ward we recommend the taking of the block bounded by Metropolitan and Driggs avenues, North First street and Bedford avenue, a part of which we believe is now occupied by the city, and the remainder being vacant lots.

For the Flushing avenue section reaching the residents of both the Seventh and Nineteenth wards, we recommend the property lying between Flushing, Bedford and Franklin avenues and Wallabout street.

For the upper section of the thickly settled Sixteenth Ward and the lower part of the fast growing Eighteenth Ward, we suggest the taking of the land between Bushwick avenue, White, Moore and Selgel streets.

REAL ESTATE NOTES

The Ludin Realty Co., real estate operators, have removed their offices from 514 West 36th st to 259 West 34th st, near 8th av.

Pease & Elliman, real estate brokers and agents, have moved their uptown offices from 520 5th av to 507 5th av, just above 42d st.

M. V. Lenane, real estate, mortgage and insurance broker, has opened offices at No. 1 Hudson st. He will make a specialty of business properties and leases.

The result of the special meeting of the Board of Estimate on Wednesday, on the matter of the proposed elevated bridge loop, was the adoption of a resolution leaving it optional with the Rapid Transit Commission to settle on some other plan.

Walter C. Wyckoff, real estate broker, formerly with Brooke & Georger, has opened temporary offices at 1269 Broadway. Upon completion of the new Silo Building, northwest corner 5th av and 45th st, Mr. Wyckoff will occupy a suite of offices and be the renting agent.

R. I. Brown's Sons were the brokers who sold for Paulina Goeltz, Marie Mantel and William A. Sinclair the property to be used by the city as a site for a Carnegie Library, south side of 169th st, between Franklin av and Boston road, with a frontage of 178 ft. on McKinley square.

As will be noticed in the usual table of statistics, the filings of mortgages and deeds in the several boroughs are very heavy—three or four times more than in an average summer week. In a large measure they represent the business of months ago, the records of which were held back so as to obtain the advantage of the new mortgage law. A considerable share of them represent old loans made over so as to come under the new law.

Owing to the protests of commercial interests, it is anticipated that the repaving of 3d and Melrose avs in the Bronx will be indefinitely postponed. An engineer of the Finance Department has reported to the Controller that the repaving of Melrose av would be a waste of money. Bids which had been received for the Melrose paving have been rejected, and bids for repaving 3d av. from Harlem Bridge to 177th st. have not yet been asked for.

Frame building at Bay Ridge, Bath Beach and Bensonhurst is scarcely as numerically strong this season as in 1905, for reasons not readily understood when the demand for moderate priced detached dwellings is so keen. A considerable number of dwellings are in the market, but at figures which inquirers do not seem to favor. In a certain sense the market is blocked; owners of houses bought within a year or two cannot sell and realize a profit at values which the present market is willing to pay, and builders are not erecting the type of house for which the public is waiting. Builders in these sections, as at Flatbush and Borough Park, have made money in the past five years, but the condition of the money market this spring and the general costs are said to have deterred them.

According to real estate dealers in Bay Ridge the demand for property in that section is constantly increasing, and individual buyers are acquiring large tracts of unimproved land for purposes of investment. One buyer, Max Kurzrok, a well-known shirtwaist manufacturer of 3d av and 47th st, Manhattan, has bought an amount of property estimated at nearly a million dollars within the past fifteen months, and the sale of 600 lots for about $350,000, to Andrew Mayer, who resold half of them recently at about $700 apiece, is another instance of the many transactions now going through. Mapledoram & Co., through whom these sales were effected, state that the market is as good as ever, in spite of the fact that most of the large investors are out of town. This statement is confirmed by Oliver Johnson, Cornelius Van Brunt, Peter L. Cortelyou and other dealers in the section. Oliver Johnson recently completed the sale of the Albert Johnson place, on the Shore Road, for about $60,000, to William Selsenick, a South Brooklyn investor.

The semi-annual report of the Lawyers' Mortgage Company, published as of July 1, 1906, and which appears in another column, indicates a most gratifying increase of business over former years. A table of comparison with the years 1903, 1904 and 1905 shows that the net increase in the amount of outstanding guaranteed mortgages during the past six months was $7,405,296, the company having sold during that time $12,629,387, making the total of outstanding guaranteed mortgages at present $48,282,077. The company does business only in improved sections of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx, the proportion of its mortgages in these boroughs being respectively 66, 28 and 6 per cent. The accounts of the company were examined by the Audit Company of New York and its assets and liabilities certified to as of June 30, 1906. The total net earnings of the company for the past three years have been $1,225,810. A feature to which the company calls especial attention is its strict compliance with all the safeguarding limitations necessary to obtain and keep the confidence of the public. That it has done so is proved by the fact that it has gained 304 new customers since the first of January, 1906, making its total list of customers now 1,644.

Nothing that has happened in the fortnight has materially altered the mortgage money question, but it is a general belief that the unfavorable situation is being prolonged and accentuated only by the fact that this is naturally a dull season and finds many absentees among the financial powers who might contribute strongly to a rectification of the flow of funds. The title companies confirm only in part reports of difficulty encountered in disposing of mortgage securities, though transactions in "layer" mortgages may have been suspended so far as some parties are concerned. Under this plan a borrower in need, for example, of \$80,000, on property worth only \$100,000, could oftentimes apply successfully to a title company for such an accommodation. While charging $5\frac{1}{2}$ or 6 per cent. on the total sum, the title company would arrange with some insurance company to loan 65 per cent. of it at the rate of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., the title company turning the mortgage over to the insurance company and taking back an agreement covering 15 per cent. of the total loan. The profit to the title company and the safety to the insurance company are both apparent. Reasons have combined to suspend in part for the present the purchase by life insurance companies of mortgages underwritten by the title companies, and the daily records from Wall st indicate that a great deal of capital which formerly went into mortgage securities is being put on call loans. The position of savings banks with respect to real estate mortgages has been reported for several months. Yet there is this to be said, that the facts are not so serious as commonly reported. Money is not unattainable; its circulation is by no means suspended, and good inducements always command attention. Neither the title companies nor the loaning institutions have shut down on real estate loans in any absolute sense.

The labor troubles in the building trades on the Jersey shore have culminated in a lockout of union men in all the affiliated unions by the associated bosses, but the non-union mechanics have been permitted to continue, and the independent employers are also proceeding as formerly. Several thousand men are idle, and business is very much interfered with.

Early Brick Making.

L. G. Tyler, President of William and Mary College, of Williamsburgh, Va., wrote an interesting article in a recent number of the Century Magazine, disputing the commonly accepted theory that in the early Colonial days bricks were imported from England. But competent and careful investigation of early parish records both in the library of the college and Bruton Church at Williamsburgh sustains President Tyler's contention—that it was easier to import brick makers than brick.

Mr. William H. Hunt, of Cleveland, ex-President of the National Association of Brick Manufacturers, maintains that there was an abundance of good brick clay in both Virginia and Maryland. It seems clear that brick were made almost contemporaneously with the first settlement. John Herd, bricklayer, and William Garrett, bricklayer, are distinguished as being the first recorded members of that craft. They came to Virginia in May, 1607. The same list records the name, Ed Brunts, mason. The crude methods of the early English brick maker were not difficult to follow.

It is regrettable that the name of the first American brick maker cannot be determined, although the records are indisputable, establishing the first kiln at Jamestown, Va., during the years 1607-8. The first product of this kiln was employed in the Protestant church built at that time.

Perhaps no man is better versed in the history of bricks and brick making than Mr. Hunt. He speaks with interest and authority, having been in the business for many years.

"Not more than twenty years ago," he says, "a pressed brick or a brick for facing the exterior walls of a building was universally understood to be a brick of red color, of a clay finely ground insuring close face texture when carefully molded or pressed, with edges true and parallel.

"In due time the artistic or æsthetic mind protested against this universal color scheme, and to introduce variety light burning fire clays came into use. First came the buff or cream colors, and finally the genius of the brick maker was exercised to satisfy the ever changing fancy of the architect and the owner for 'something new,' so that it has become possible by the mixing and manipulation of clays to produce in burned clay bricks almost every known color, and in a variety of shades.

"The demand for 'something new' brought for the facing bricks of different size or proportions; the 'Roman' brick, long and narrow, the 'Norman' brick, of Roman length and standard thickness. The common 'American' standard of size is slightly larger than the 'Dutch' and smaller than the 'English.' These are the proportions which characterize the bricks used in the earliest Colonial buildings and which continue to be more or less popularized because of their early employment.

"In the beginning of this demand for 'something new' an enterprising brick maker in Western Pennsylvania introduced a product which he termed a 'Pompeian' brick, declared to be a reproduction of bricks formerly used in that ancient city.

"My careful investigation of the ruins of Pompeii have failed to discover bricks of like character, in point of color or texture, being similar only in respect to proportion.

"I did not observe in any instance the use of bricks either at Pompeii or at Rome with a view to exposure of the bricks in the finished wall; there appeared to be universally the practice of covering the wall with stucco or cement coating, which often was painted in brilliant colors.

"The term 'Roman' as used by the American clay worker designates the size of the brick rather than the texture or color, not necessarily a fixed size, but a brick long and narrow. The Egyptian bricks of the Roman period are larger in size, both in length and thickness, than any of the ancient brick work observed in Italy.

"The so-called Flavian Palace on Palatine Hill in Rome was constructed of triangular shaped bricks, so placed in position as to create a flush wall both inside and out, the core of the wall filled with rubble or concrete. The brick work was concealed by a coating of plaster.

"Brick making has been one of the world's foremost industries since prehistoric time. During the Roman supremacy chosen families were conceded exclusive privileges for the manufacture of bricks entering into the construction of stately buildings.

"The dignity and importance of the clay worker of that early period has been regained in recent years by the genius of American enterprise. In no other country has the art of clay working reached such huge proportions or developed to the same degree, the art of mixing and burning clay with a view to satisfying every mechanical requirement and the most exacting critic of the artistic expression of the product with respect to color and texture. It has become possible to produce in burned clay bricks practically every known color in a great variety of shades.

"In trade importance, the brick maker, particularly of high grade product, ranks with the foremost production experts of the world's industry. But one other American manufacturing industry, that of iron and steel, is greater in volume and importance."

H. L. Suydam & Co. leased the building 437 East 23d st to Wynn Bros. for a long term of years; also the building 3 Rivington st to Isa R. Cook & Watkins, importers and producers of granite, marble, etc., of Boston, enthuse over a new pink granite known as Excelsior Pink. "It takes a fine polish," they claim, "and shows a great contrast between axed and polished work." They declare this granite to be in every respect as good as Westerly or Millstone Point, and that the cost is at least twenty-five per cent. less.

THE VANTINE NAME.

Supreme Court Justice Truax reserved decision, on an application by Daniel Bacon and his wife, Charlotte Vantine Bacon, as executors of the estate of Ashley A. Vantine, for an injunction to restrain A. A. Vantine & Co., a joint stock corporation, from continuing the use of the name Vantine in connection with the sale of Turkish rugs and other Oriental wares.

From the papers submitted it appears that in 1882 Ashley A. Vantine retired from partnership in the firm, except so far as related to the Turkish rugs and carpets, which were his hobby. Irving E. Raymond, now president of the corporation, and Henry K. Bull, Jr., continued to carry on the other business of the firm. Five years later Mr. Vantine entered into an agreement with the other partners by which he consented to the use of his name for a period of fifteen years. That agreement expired, according to the executors, on December 9, 1902, and all right in the name of A. A. Vantine in connection with the Oriental importing business reverted to the heirs of Ashley A. Vantine.

The defendants, however, have continued to use the name, asserting that the corporation acquired title to it in 1894, and that Mr. Vantine's heirs lost all right in the name at his death.

The executors estimate the value of the name at $50,000, or at least $5,000 a year, to the corporation. The heirs of Mr. Vantine were his wife, Harriet, who is dead, and his two daughters, Mrs. Charlotte V. Bacon and Lady Gilbert Parker. The latter is not a party to the injunction suit.

The Sound Realty Co. sold to A. Schatzkin & Co. 18 lots on Ash, Corsa, Beech and Cedar avs, Laconia Park.

CONVEYANCES

Whenever the letters Q. C., C. a. G. and B. & S. occur, preceded by the name of the grantee, they mean as follows:

1st.—Q. C. is an abbreviation for Quit Claim deed, i. e., a deed wherein all the right, title and interest of the grantor is conveyed, omitting all covenants and warranty.

2d.—C. a. G. means a deed containing Covenant against Grantor only, in which he covenants that he hath not done any act whereby the estate conveyed may be impeached, charged or encumbered.

3d.—B. & S. is an abbreviation for Bargain and Sale deed, wherein, although the seller makes no expressed consideration, and thus impliedly claims to be the owner of it. The street or avenue numbers given in these lists are, in all cases, taken from the insurance maps when they are not mentioned in the deeds. The numbers, it will occasionally be found, do not correspond with the existing ones, owing to there having been no official designation made of them by the Department of Public Works.

4th.—The first date is the date the deed was drawn. The second date is the date of filing same. When both dates are the same, only one is given.

5th.—The figures in each conveyance, thus, 2:482—10, denote that the property mentioned is in section 2, block 482, lot 10.

6th.—It should also be noted in section and block numbers that the instrument as filed is strictly followed.

7th.—A $20,000—$30,000 indicates the assessed value of the property, the first figures being for the lot only, and the second figures representing both lot and building. Letter P before second figure indicates that the property is assessed as in course of construction.

MORTGAGES

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows; The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given and the amount. The general dates used as headlines are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.
Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street, in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.
The first date is the date the mortgage was drawn, the second the date of filing; when both dates are the same, only one is given.
Subscribers will find mortgages in this list with the wrong block number attached. The block number we give is taken from the instrument as filed.
Mortgages against Bronx property will be found altogether at the foot of this list.

July 12, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18.
